

Killer hunt 'bungled'

By Mary Neiswender
Staff Writer

Despite a "task force" of 55 detectives, no one from the Los Angeles Police Department has bothered to look at the apartment of the latest strangler victim, nor interview the girl's landlord or neighbors.

An oversight?

Not so, say those close to the strangler case. It's another bungle by the makeshift crew of robbery, vice and other officers that have been assigned — and are under heavy public pressure — to find the killer or killers of 11 young women in the past nine weeks.

Criticism has been leveled at the giant department — considered by many as among the best in the country — for failure to respond when the latest victim, a known prostitute, suddenly and mysteriously disappeared.

But that isn't the only criticism.

Lois Lee, a sociologist and founder of CAT (California Association for Trollops), an organization trying to get prostitution decriminalized in California, has complained that she was unable to interest Task Force officers in the disappearance of what turned out to be the so-called Hillside Strangler's 11th victim.

The girl, 17-year-old Diane Martin, answered a telephone call from an outcall "modeling" service in Hollywood at about 9 p.m. Tuesday. When she failed to check in — a policy of the agency — the agency called Ms. Lee, who labels herself as a buffer between the police and the outcall agencies.

Ms. Lee said she checked the phone number given by the man who had called for the service and found it to be a pay phone outside a Hollywood public library, and she found the address given the girl to be a vacant apartment.

She called Los Angeles Police and went to the West Los Angeles Sheriff's station where, deputies, she said, deputies repeatedly called the LAPD task force trying to get investigators to talk to her.

She claimed that excuses such as "We've changed shifts" and "We forgot" were given for more than three hours. Finally, when a report was taken by telephone — at about 1:30 a.m., some five hours before the girl's body was found — no one bothered to go any further, she says. From that point, no one checked with the girl's friends or neighbors, nor checked her apartment.

As of late Saturday, Samantha and George Petri, managers of the apartment building, haven't seen nor talked with Los Angeles police.

"I sealed the room myself right after the body was identified and a reporter came to talk with me," Mrs. Petri said. "Some nice officers from the sheriff's department came by and tried to put us in touch with the task force, but apparently they didn't want to talk with us."

The task force doesn't talk to many people, however, especially the press. The only sources of information for reporters — other than their own investigations

Inside Sunday

New 'gold rush'

... on the house

A new 'gold rush' is on in America. This Mother Lode is in the increasing value of houses, and America's homeowners are mining it at an astonishing annual rate of some $60 billion. Page A-4.

Economy's good

... if not bad

There's good news on the economic front for next year, and then again there's bad news on the economic front for next year. It depends on who's talking. One thing's sure—things will get worse if they don't get better or stay the same. Page A-6.

TV bullets

... leave no blood

TV violence has come under criticism again, this time for its lack of realism. A study by the U.S. Conference of Mayors says the bloodless way in which TV treats murder and mayhem misleads the public about the suffering and pain of violence. Page A-10.

Same record

... two sides

It's one thing campaigning against bureaucrats; quite another when you become one yourself. Some former consumer advocates are finding that out. But they don't think they've changed. They're simply "compromising." Page A-20.

Nervous child

... what's cooking?

The child was such a nervous wreck that his school recommended he be placed in a special home. A psychiatrist entered the picture and came up with what proved to be a winning solution: The boy's father should spend all day planning how to criticize his wife's cooking. Simple. Page A-22.

New location

... same business

It seemed like a reasonable idea. Get mob figures to testify against their bosses on the promise of paid relocation with a new identity. A lot of them chose Southern California. And in no time at all the new residents had established themselves. ... as hired killers, strong-arm men, extortionists, and other such genteel occupations. Page B-12.

DNA

It was 1953. In a small "hut" in Cambridge, England, two highly ambitious and imaginative scientists, James Dewey Watson, a 25-year-old American, and Francis Crick, a British biologist, were huddling over a tinker-toy style model of spidery arms and interlocking metallic clamps.

They tinkered all morning with the contraption. Shortly before noon, the American and the Englishman glanced at one another, possessed by the sublime excitement of standing in the presence of something that no one had ever seen.

By lunchtime Crick had drawn a great circle of his colleagues around him, "telling everyone that we had found the secret of life."

Crick's and Watson's announcement, offered with more scientific circumspection in the April 25, 1953, edition of the British journal Nature, transformed modern biology. Their discovery was hailed as the biological equivalent to the splitting of the atom.

It was "the greatest achievement of science in the 20th century," claimed one British Nobel prize winner.

Certainly the discovery of deoxyribose nucleic acid (DNA), the fundamental mole-cule of life, was one of the epic discoveries in the history of scientific thought.

Located along the chromosomes of the cell, the DNA molecule is shaped like a long, twisting, double helix, a kind of microscopic spiral staircase. The steps of the staircase, called "base units," are the most significant component of the structure and contain an endless variation of patterns that form the genes. The collective interaction of the genes directs the growth and development of living organisms.

String a few hundred genes together and the result might be a simple bacteria. Hook a million genes together, and something else will result — man or a woman, or an elephant, or an oak tree or a polar bear.

Conceptually, DNA is a tiny computer, miniaturized beyond Sony's wildest dreams. If all the DNA in the cells of a human being were unraveled and strung together, it would stretch the distance from the earth to the sun and back, 400 times. Yet, in its natural state, the DNA contained in a human being is so tightly packed that it could fit into a cube measuring just one square inch on a side.

Mideast 'on road to peace,' U.S. says

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — New Israeli negotiating proposals put the Middle East "on the road to peace," Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said Saturday night.

The optimistic appraisal followed a two-hour meeting between President Carter and Prime Minister Menachem Begin and was shared by the two leaders.

But other American officials cautioned that while Begin's proposals were constructive, additional steps will have to be taken by all Middle East parties to resolve the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's preliminary — and undisclosed — assessment of the peace proposal was conveyed to Begin by Carter at the White House meeting.

A formal response was withheld pending a meeting of the two Middle East leaders in Egypt within 10 days.

"It was a wonderful talk,"

Begin beamed to reporters on his return to Blair House. "I think we made headway."

The White House, meanwhile, issued a statement saying Carter found Begin's presentation "a notable contribution" toward an overall settlement.

It pledged continuing American cooperation in the search for a peace agreement and welcomed the approaching talks between Begin and Sadat.

The mood at the White House was buoyant as Carter smiled broadly in welcoming Begin to the Cabinet Room. Even the usually cautious Vance observed: "I think we are on the road to peace."

However, in reading the White House statement to reporters, he stressed the U.S. view that the Israeli-Egyptian negotiations are a part of the broader goal of "a just and comprehensive peace."

That means the administration still hopes to draw Syria, Jordan and Lebanon into the negotiating process. Leaders of all three countries told Vance last week that they would boycott the Cairo negotiations.

Begin, who spent most of Saturday, the Jewish Sabbath, resting, wished Israeli and U.S. reporters at the White House a good week and said: "The situation is good; the situation is satisfactory. You see, everybody is smiling."

The White House statement said Carter "pledged the continuing cooperation of the United States."

Carter sees defense need

By James Gerstenzang
Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. — President Carter said Saturday that the United States is unexcelled in the technology and competence of its military forces, but needs to bolster its "immediate strike forces."

He said his administration was increasing defense spending to meet this "most serious need."

Carter made his comments while visiting this military-oriented city in southeastern North Carolina for the wedding of his nephew, Sydney Scott Stapleton, and Caro Lee Ganey.

During a short break from a 22-hour family reunion, Carter said his administration's "contribution for defense efforts has gone up in real dollars."

"We have compensated for the inflation rate and then added on top of that an additional amount to increase our defense standing," said Carter, who promised last year to cut Pentagon spending if he won the presidency.

In an interview from the home of his sister, Ruth Carter Stapleton, mother of the bridegroom, Carter told WFNC radio in Fayetteville, "We are trying to focus our attention on the elements of our defense posture which I think were in most serious need — immediate strike forces on hand in this country."

"Our defense posture will be kept strong," Carter said. "In technology and competence I think that our military forces are unexcelled in the world."

He acknowledged that the Soviet Union has superiority in the number of tanks in Europe but said, "We are trying to make sure that those tanks are vulnerable. We are developing new weapons of our own."

This was an apparent reference to the neutron bomb, the enhanced radiation weapon that the administration has proposed to counter any Soviet bloc invasion of Western Europe.

"I don't think anyone needs to worry about the United States being second in military strength to anybody," he said.

Fayetteville is the home of the sprawling Fort Bragg Army post and Pope Air Force Base.

While Carter was in Fayetteville, the White House released a 21-page summary of what it considered Carter's domestic policy

'Death notifications' a massive hoax

A cruel telephone hoax Friday and Saturday led scores of Southland residents to believe they had lost close relatives in weekend traffic accidents.

Prank calls placed by at least three persons continued late Saturday to residents of the Huntington Beach, Newport Beach and Costa Mesa areas, according to the Huntington Beach police. Approximately 100 such calls were reported in two days.

Lt. John Foster said callers claimed to be Huntington Beach police and asked their victims whether their spouses or children were at home.

If a "no" answer was received, Foster said, the caller would say the relative was believed dead in a major accident on Pacific Coast Highway.

The hoax victim would then be instructed to go to Huntington Intercommunity Hospital or Hoag Memorial in Newport to identify the accident victims, he said.

The caller identified himself as "Officer Owens" or "Officer Reynolds" of the "Huntington Beach Central Police Department," Foster said, and was sometimes interrupted by police

Viets may free yacht trio by Christmas

Combined News Services

Parents of three Americans held in Vietnam since their yacht was seized by Vietnamese authorities nine weeks ago said Saturday they have been notified unofficially that their children will be home by Christmas.

"We can only hope it's true," said Fred Dallenbaugh of Vero Beach, Fla. "We have had supposedly good news before that did not materialize."

Dallenbaugh said he was notified by Cora Weiss of New York, a well-known anti-war activist who has close ties with the Vietnamese government. He said she told him the Vietnamese have charged his daughter with trespassing and were confiscating the boat.

In New York on Saturday, Ms. Weiss said she had been told by "reliable sources," whom she refused to identify, that the three would be released. She said the "release will take place in the next few days and I informed the families so they would not wake up some morning and read it in the newspapers."

She said she had "no knowledge of the details."

"My own view," she said, "is that we should be considering what reciprocal gesture the United States can make and also what the United States is going to offer so that normalization of relations between the two countries can begin. Vietnam has a desperate need for food and we have a surplus."

The State Department declined comment.

The three detained Americans were identified as Dallenbaugh's daughter, Cornelia Anne, 28; Charles Affel, 30, of Philadelphia; and Leland Dickerman, 29, of Flagstaff, Ariz.

The Vietnamese took the three into custody Oct. 12, claiming their 35-foot yacht, the Brillig, had strayed into Vietnam's territorial waters.

Hanoi officials later said they were investigating suspicious drugs and sophisticated diving equipment found aboard the sailing vessel. Last week, Dickerman's mother, Virginia Ward, said a United Nations source told her the Vietnamese no longer suspected the three of spying or smuggling drugs.

When the boat was seized, the three radioed first that they were being approached by two vessels and later that they were being towed to Ho Chi Minh City (formerly Saigon). A third radio message said eight shots had been fired by the Vietnamese but that no one had been injured.

The 'Born Again' struck by thieves

A film crew working on the movie adaptation of "Born Again," a Watergate-related book by former White House aide Charles Colson, has received some first-hand experience with larceny.

The crew's room at the Holiday Inn in Arlington, Va., was burglarized Saturday morning and the thieves escaped with a movie camera, adding machine and typewriter.

Colson, a former special counsel to President Richard Nixon, served seven months in federal prison after pleading guilty in 1974 to obstructing justice in connection with the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Colson was also indicted in connection with the Watergate burglary but those charges were dropped after his guilty plea.

"Born Again" recounts Colson's experiences during the Watergate scandal and his conversion to a deeply religious life centered around helping those in prison.

Robert Munger Productions of Burbank, which owned the stolen camera, has been filming the movie version of the book in Washington and Hollywood.

The hotel where the larceny occurred is almost directly across the Potomac River from the Watergate complex.

Marcos winning Philippine vote

Combined News Services

MANILA, the Philippines — In what has become almost an annual ritual under President Ferdinand E. Marcos's martial law regime, Filipinos voted Saturday on whether to keep Marcos in office. Early returns showed him winning a strong endorsement.

Technically the Filipino people were voting on whether they wanted to continue him as president-prime minister.

If they vote yes, Marcos remains as president and will also become prime minister indefinitely.

If they vote no, Marcos will remain as president anyway and will also still be prime minister until a new interim national assembly is elected. Since only Marcos can determine when the national assembly will be called into being, he essentially cannot lose in the referendum.

Students seize 7 churches

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Groups of students seized seven churches in Managua Saturday and demanded amnesty for political prisoners.

Officials said about 100 youths were involved in the takeovers. They were identified as members of the Student Revolutionary Front at the National University.

National guard troops surrounded the churches but did not attempt to dislodge the demonstrators.

Belgrade talks impasse

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — The conference reviewing implementation of the Helsinki accords ran into a procedural deadlock Saturday because of Soviet attempts to stop more Western discussion of human rights.

The impasse was described by Western and Soviet diplomats as the most serious of the 2½-month-old conference. They expressed fear it could block further work by the gathering of delegates from 35 nations.

Oil price freeze seen

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Saudi Arabia, supported by Iran, is virtually certain of pushing through a freeze on crude oil prices at the forthcoming meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, an influential publication reported Saturday.

The Middle East Economic Survey, a weekly newsletter specializing in oil industry matters, quoted Saudi oil minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani as saying the sluggish world demand for crude oil was the decisive factor in his country's opposition to a price increase in 1978.

OPEC, a 13-nation cartel, is to open a conference on pricing Tuesday in Caracas, Venezuela.

Kidnap victim ransomed

VIENNA, Austria — Liselotte Boehm, the wife of Austria's so-called Textile King, was released unharmed early Saturday after being held by kidnapers for more than five days. A police spokesman said her family paid a ransom of more than $1.2 million.

Behind each woman...

CLIO, Mich. — The Underdog Club, a tiny group whose aim is to help a deserving underdog each year, is giving its 1977 award to Fred Schlafly, husband of Equal Rights Amendment foe Phyllis Schlafly.

Club president Pete Moeller said Schlafly, of Alton, Ill., was picked as bottom dog this year for being "the man behind Phyllis."

Second place in the 1978 underdog race goes to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, the National Football League team which lost 25 games before its first victory this year.

Homestead

Can you give me some information on the state's homestead law? I'm alone now and feel I must protect myself against losing my home. Mrs. S.J., Wilmington.

Homesteading generally protects a person's house from forced sale for the benefit of certain creditors. It doesn't protect you from foreclosure because of mortgage default or tax or mechanics' liens. For a married couple, single head of household or single person over 65, the first $30,000 of equity is covered. For others, the limit is $15,000.

If you have more equity than the homestead protects, your creditors technically could force the sale of your house, but they would have to pay off the mortgage and pay you the homesteaded amount. It's unlikely they'd take such a step unless you have substantially more equity than the homestead protects.

For full protection, the homestead must be recorded before a lien is filed. But even if you fail to homestead prior to a lien being recorded, a 1975 law allows a person to file a claim of exemption, which would permit him to remain in his home.

You must live in the house when you file the homestead, but it continues to protect the property as long as you retain ownership even if you move out. You can, however, homestead only one house at a time. If you sell the property, the homestead is automatically abandoned, but the proceeds from the sale would be protected from creditors as long as you buy and homestead another house within six months.

You can buy a Declaration of Homestead form at most stationery stores. Fill it out, have it notarized and file it with the Los Angeles County Recorder, 227 N. Broadway, Los Angeles, Calif. 90012. The filing fee is $3 for the first page and $1 for each additional page. The homestead procedure is explained in detail in the book, "Protect Your Home," which is available for $4.45 from Nolo Press, P.O. Box 544, Occidental, Calif. 95465.

Big bite

In January, I had oral surgery performed at the UC Irvine Medical Center and was assured that Medi-Cal would pay the entire bill, but I keep getting notices from a collection agency. My bill was $273, but the latest notice shows a balance of $172, and I've been unable to straighten this out. Can Action Line help? M.H., Long Beach.

Your account has been cleared, and you should receive a new statement from the hospital in January showing that no balance is due, according to a spokeswoman for the medical center. She said the center's bookkeeping staff was behind in their work, and maintained the mistake eventually would have been corrected.

You were granted retroactive Medi-Cal coverage after you had the surgery performed, and the hospital had to wait several months for Medi-Cal to pay. The state covered only $101 of your bill, leaving a balance of $172. But in cases such as yours, the medical center accepts whatever Medi-Cal pays as payment in full, and you shouldn't have been billed for the $172.

Senior bus pass

My wife and I are Canadians in our 70s and we're going to be living in Long Beach for about six months. While here, we'll be paying sales tax and no doubt our share of property taxes through our rent.

Not being permanent residents, we'll never benefit from Medicare or other welfare programs, but we sure would appreciate being allowed to travel on the RTD buses at the senior citizen rate. Would this be possible? T.M., Long Beach.

You can get passes that will allow you to travel on the Long Beach Public Transportation Co. and the RTD buses for 10 cents a ride, but it can take several weeks to process your applications.

In Long Beach, the applications are handled by the Senior Opportunities and Services Center, 406 E. First St. An SOS spokeswoman said that as long as you have a Long Beach address and bring proof of your age, you can get the passes. You must apply for the Long Beach Public Transportation Co. pass on Mondays between 10 a.m. and 11:30 a.m., but you can get the RTD application any weekday from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

RTD passes are available to anyone over 62 years of age. For the Long Beach pass, a person must be over 65 or if he's 62 through 64, he must be collecting Social Security or some form of retirement pay. Totally disabled persons over the age of 18 also may get a Long Beach bus pass.

Positive thinking

I have a very old glass negative photographic plate, which appears to be in perfect condition, showing the young likeness of an ancestor. Can Action Line find someone capable of making a print from this negative? H.E.H., Long Beach.

As long as the plate is not unusually large, which you tell us yours is not, most photo processors probably could make a print for you. One photographer and processor in Long Beach who will do this type of work is Harry Merrick, 1901 W. Anaheim St.

One photographer told Action Line the emulsion surface of those old glass negatives is very delicate and must be handled extremely carefully to avoid scratching them and marring the pictures.

L.A. hunt on for 3 escaped prisoners

CASTAIC (AP) — Three of five prisoners who escaped from the Wayside Honor Rancho maximum security facility were being sought Saturday after they pried open a window and jumped 18 feet to the jail yard and freedom, authorities said.

Los Angeles County Sheriff's deputies said the two other escapees were caught shortly after they left their dormitory, one in the yard next to the building and the other about a mile away.

A sheriff's department helicopter was scanning the area around this northern Los Angeles suburb for the prisoners, missing since Friday night.

The prisoners apparently broke out of a second-story cell by using makeshift tools constructed from a dismantled bed bunk frame. The prisoners broke the glass and pried open a three-quarter-inch thick bar in an 8-by-36-inch window of a second-story cell.

Deputy Robert Woods said a guard patrolling one of two dormitories was unaware of the incident and two guard towers overlooking the yard were unmanned at the time. The two dormitories are separated by concrete walls.

Light rain increases accidents

Light rain discouraged Christmas shoppers Saturday in the Southland but spurred a sharp increase in minor traffic accidents.

The showers were expected to continue this morning, with skies clearing by tonight.

Long Beach Airport recorded .04 of an inch of precipitation between 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. By late afternoon, rain at the Los Angeles Civic Center measured .32 of an inch, while Santa Monica had .28 and Mt. Wilson had .27.

Police said the rate of accidents was at least double the normal. No flooding was reported, and weathermen said the ground was so dry that the water was soaking right into the ground.

The heaviest rain fell in Central California. Salinas had over 2 inches between 4 a.m. and 10 a.m. Heavy snow was reported in the Sierra Nevada above 5,500 feet. The snow level in Southern California mountains was 8,000 feet.

Dog defends blind master from attack

A 60-pound seeing-eye dog battled a dog nearly twice her size to protect her master after a Compton student allegedly sicked his 110-pound Malamute on a blind teacher. Sheriff's deputies reported Saturday.

Carson sheriff's deputies said Joseph Scott, 18, 1416 S. Dwight St., was arrested shortly after the 12:30 p.m. Friday incident and was booked for suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon.

George Ross, 63, 520 E. El Segundo Blvd., Compton, told deputies he was approaching Chester Adult School, 1104 148th St., when he heard a man say, "Sic 'im! Sic 'im!" and moments later heard a dogfight.

Witnesses said Ross's seeing-eye dog Ginger jumped to her master's defense, and passers-by pulled the Alaskan sled dog off Ginger, a 16-month-old German Shepherd.

The Malamute was taken to the County Animal Shelter. Ginger was treated for lacerations of her left ear and released from the Alameda Animal Hospital.

Man killed, couple hurt in collision

A Pico Rivera man was killed and a Norwalk couple injured Saturday in Santa Fe Springs when the man lost control of his pickup truck and crossed over into oncoming traffic, sheriff's deputies reported.

John Dragatto, 58, 7039 S. Loch Alene Ave., was fatally injured at 4 p.m. when his southbound pickup truck crossed the center line of Norwalk Boulevard near Smith Road and was hit broadside by a van driven by Patrick Galle.

Galle and his wife Linda, 11944 Pantheon St., were taken to Whittier Presbyterian Hospital. Mrs. Galle was listed in stable condition after orthopedic surgery and her husband was transferred to Kaiser Hospital in Bellflower, where he was listed in good condition.

America finds 'treasure' in family homes

By Henry Scott-Stokes
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — In greatly increasing numbers, American families are raising cash by borrowing against the enormous appreciation in the market value of their homes.

For homeowners across the country, borrowing has become a way of getting some cash out of their most successful investment — the single-family house, typically the most substantial asset a family owns. Without selling their homes, Americans are renegotiating and extending their mortgages, shouldering greater debt at higher interest rates, and in some cases taking out second mortgages.

"My house was on the line, and the banks wouldn't help," said Herbert Mednick, a New Jersey man whose business failed a year or so ago. Mednick kept going by taking out a $17,000 second mortgage on his home and using the proceeds to go back into business supplying sales promotion gifts for big companies.

"That mortgage just changed the whole outlook," he said.

The increased borrowing by homeowners has caused an explosion in mortgage debt on existing homes, which has tripled in magnitude in less than three years. By putting cash in homeowners' pockets, the mortgage borrowings have provided a novel source of consumer credit, fueled consumer spending, and helped the United States climb out of the 1975 world recession faster than any other nation.

"There has never been anything like this in the home area," said Alan Greenspan, the economic consultant, who has done pathbreaking research bringing out the linkage between inflation, mortgage borrowing and consumer spending.

"Values change when you have capital gains like these," Greenspan said. "People no longer think a mortgage is just something to take out to buy a home. It can be a means of cashing in on your gain."

It can also be a means of getting too deeply into debt. The mortgage explosion, while allowing homeowners to borrow about half of the capital gain implicit in the rise in the market value of a house, also implies that consumers are locking themselves into larger long-term debt — and high-cost debt at that. Today's mortgage rates are appreciably higher than those on mortgages written years ago, and rates on second mortgages, where they are permitted, are even higher.

Large numbers of homeowners nevertheless apparently feel comfortable in tapping part of the substantial inflation-induced growth in the value of their home. An average single-family house, which cost less than $25,000 in 1970, now fetches $50,000, having more than doubled in value.

Greenspan, who was chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Ford, says mortgage debt is growing at a startling rate, almost as fast as housing values.

In April, May and June this year, the latest quarter for which statistics are available, the market value of the nation's entire stock of single-family, owner-occupied homes — the classic American house — was increasing at an annual rate of $62.2 billion, Greenspan has calculated. In the same period, net new mortgages written on that housing stock were growing at a $60.2 billion annual rate, he found.

The result of that mortgage borrowing was to put an additional $60.2 billion in consumers' pockets. That was an increase of nearly 5 percent in disposable income, which was then running $1,292 billion in total.

Some families realize their gains in the classic way — by selling their homes. Perry Prentice, who lived on Long Island, sold his home there and retired to Florida. His house in the Hamptons, which he had purchased with a $21,000

Farm protest striking out

By Marc Charney
Associated Press

Despite the attention drawn by tractor caravans and supermarket picketing, the strike by farmers seeking higher prices for their produce has had little visible effect on the nation's food marketplace.

In Iowa, Missouri, and Montana, for example, it was business as usual at grain and livestock markets on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday — the first three days of the strike during which the farmers say they will not market or plant any crops.

There were local effects here and there. Some livestock markets in Georgia and South Carolina shut down in sympathy with the strike, and the Omaha, Neb., livestock market reported a 50 percent decline in hog receipts on Thursday.

But figures for livestock trading at 11 major markets surveyed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Marketing Service indicated it was at or near normal on a national level last week.

And the Kansas City Board of Trade, a major grain-trading center, reported no trends attributable to the strike.

The protest has, however, aroused concern among governors of 10 farm states, who talked by telephone with Agriculture

Secretary Bob Bergland Friday and chided the administration for not doing enough to end the strike. The farmers want the federal government's help in guaranteeing that they receive a profitable price for their crops.

Bergland announced later that he would meet with representatives of the striking farmers, but no date or site was announced.

The strike drew little enthusiasm from dairy farmers, and fresh produce moved to market as usual in California, the source of much of the nation's perishable fruits and vegetables in December.

At a 3,000-member cooperative in Ralston, Iowa, manager Wayne Seaman said:

"We're really seeing no effect so far. Purchases are running about average for this time of year. Beans jumped up (in price) yesterday and they're down a little today. I'd say prices are stable."

And in Columbia, S.C., fresh produce wholesaler Jimmy Hook said he doesn't think the farmers he deals with could afford not to harvest.

"If a farmer's got stuff in the field that's ready to harvest today and if he doesn't harvest it by Monday, it's ruined," Hook said.

The difference between fresh produce farmers and grain farmers — whose product can be stored — is perhaps the biggest reason that the strike's strongest supporters so far have been grain farmers.

But the fact that grain can be stored also brings a weakness to the strike movement. While shortages of fresh produce would quickly be noticed on supermarket shelves, it is tough to affect the consumer with momentary changes in the amount of grain sold by farms.

"If all farmers never sold any more grain, some day we'd have a shortage," says Rod Turnbull, a spokesman for the Kansas City Board of Trade. "But that's like saying if the sun didn't come up tomorrow, it'd be dark."

Most grain is harvested at this time of year anyway. So, many grain farmers don't talk of stopping production now — only of not planting next spring, or of storing grain rather than selling to elevators.

But the price of grain is low now — and many might store it anyway.

So the talk of withholding grain in the future has not scared the speculators at the Kansas City Board of Trade.

Good news, bad news in economy

Business Writer

The coming year will bring jobs to thousands of unemployed Americans and continued growth for the economy, although at the cost of higher interest rates on loans and higher prices for most goods.

Many of the nation's businesses, however, don't expect much respite in 1978 from the squeeze on sales and profits being caused by foreign imports.

That's the picture outlined by more than two dozen businessmen, bankers and economists interviewed in a nationwide survey by The Associated Press. The corporate executives included officials of the auto, petroleum, textile, steel and agricultural-equipment industries.

The survey found many expecting a decline in the nation's unemployment rate from the current 7.5 percent to 7 percent or less. Economists say the decline will occur because of a rising gross national product (GNP) and a leveling off in productivity, requiring more workers to meet production goals. Especially optimistic employment notes were sounded by both the auto and farm-equipment sectors, despite the competition from foreign auto-makers.

However, those surveyed also contended that Americans will be faced with slightly higher prices — especially for food — and interest rates, largely as a result of the sharp rise in the nation's money supply this year. The inflation estimates ranged up to 5 percent, compared with 6 percent this year.

Some corporate executives said it was difficult to foresee what will happen in 1978 because of the uncertainties of foreign competition and of congressional action on President Carter's various economic plans.

Steel and textile executives, for example, are adamant in their conviction that Washington must help control imports if their industries are to prosper.

Economists and bankers generally agree that the economy is growing fairly well. They expect a 4.5 percent to 5 percent annual GNP growth rate in 1978, compared with 4.7 percent in this year's third quarter. That would mean the growth rate will level off or begin to rise after dropping from 7.5 percent in this year's first quarter.

The businessmen disagreed on some specific steps that Carter should take — tax cuts and tax reform, for example — and they wondered whether the president and the business community can develop a working relationship satisfactory to businessmen.

From the interviews, these are the factors considered most likely to affect the nation's economic performance next year:

EMPLOYMENT

Perhaps the most optimistic view came from Lawrence Klein of Wharton Economic Associates of Philadelphia, who was Carter's chief economic adviser during the 1976 election campaign. He sees a drop in unemployment to around 6 percent. "We're probably getting to the point where productivity gains are smaller, which means you'll need more people for the same amount of work," he says.

Others predicted unemployment in the 6.5 percent to 7 percent range, dropping from this year's level despite the inroads of foreign imports on such labor-intensive industries as textiles.

General Motors Corp., the biggest automaker, expects to set a record for employment next year, surpassing 1973's previous high.

And there is optimism among manufacturers of farm equipment, many of whom said they're rehiring employees laid off in recent years. MPBX Corp., a major beef processor, expects a 10 percent increase in work force due to the opening of a new processing plant.

INFLATION
Economists offered mixed opinions on the inflation rate next year, with estimates ranging from 4 percent to 8 percent.
James M. Dawson, economist at National City Bank, Cleveland, expects an inflation rate near the current 6 percent, while people like William Bryan, head of the finance department at the University of Illinois, say inflation might be as low as 4 percent because there is enough excess plant capacity to increase production at a faster rate than the rise in demand.

"I expect compensation per worker to go up 8.5 percent, including fringes, and production to rise 2.5 percent per worker," said Dawson. "That means the unit labor cost goes up 6 percent, and you'd better look for prices to go up the same amount."

On the high side is Carl Arit, professor of money and banking at the University of Illinois. He sees a gain as high as 8 percent, due to sharp rises in the money supply this year, the higher minimum wage and increased Social Security taxes that employers will pass on to consumers.

also are expected to climb.
"I think we're going to see short-term interest rates moderately higher by mid-1978, perhaps half to three-quarters of a percent higher than now," says William Eagleson

Businessmen, economists give predictions

Jr., president of Philadelphia's Girard Bank. In all cases, economists agree the increases will be the result of continued demand for credit and increases in the nation's money supply. Adds Bruce Williams, vice president and economist for First National Bank of Atlanta: "We expect to see the prime rate on commercial loans rise from 7 3/4 percent, where it is now, to about 8 1/4 percent by mid-1978." Most other bankers interviewed agreed.

CAPITAL SPENDING

Capital spending for plant and equipment, a key indicator of national economic health, is one area in which the impact of foreign imports and government actions can be seen.

U.S. automakers, battling costs to keep pace with less-expensive imports, don't plan increases in what they describe as already large annual outlays. GM says 1978 spending will remain at 1977's $3.5 billion level, itself a record. Ford Motor Co. plans to stay at $2.4 billion annually the next four years, and Chrysler Corp. sees only a slight increase next year from 1977's $700 million mark.

"Our profits had better stay at record levels because our expenditures sure as heck will. The government has given us emissions and fuel-economy tasks that guarantee it," says William Bourke, Ford's executive vice president.

Most farm-equipment makers would not speculate on future capital spending. A spokesman for International Harvester Co. said this major company's new spending will be very limited until sales actually improve.

The ailing steel industry, hard hit by imports, needs to invest $3.5 billion to $4 billion a year to improve and expand production facilities, executives say, but they add that depressed 1977 earnings make it doubtful that level can be reached next year.

Oil companies are waiting until Congress and the president settle on an energy bill. "Future commitments to make the additional investments required by our nation's energy needs will be dependent upon the incentives provided under the national energy policy," says Maurice F. Granville, Texaco Inc. chairman.

ORDERS, PRODUCTION

The outlook is for a rise in orders and production in some industries compared with 1977, with car makers using the most bullish language.

"The economy is in the midst of a balanced expansion," GM Chairman Thomas Murphy says. "Thus, we are confident that the overall economy will remain healthy, and that consumers will continue to benefit from many of the same factors that laid the groundwork for the high level of demand for new cars and trucks evidenced in the 1977 model year."

Farm-related firms are forecasting, at best, flat production and consumption next year. D.E. Ewing, financial vice president of Farmland Industries Inc., Kansas City, Mo., says, however, that his firm will try to counteract any decrease in demand.

"Maybe an individual farmer's needs won't be as great, but we plan to expand into other geographic areas and more intensify in areas we already cover," he says. For that reason, Farmland is predicting a production increase of about 10 percent next year.

The steel industry expects a 4 percent to 5 percent gain in consumption next year, mostly as a result of industry and government efforts to limit imports. But executives doubt that a pickup of that magnitude will be enough to restore profits and meet capital needs.

U.S. Steel Corp., the nation's top steel maker, expects domestic consumption to climb 4 million tons to 112 million tons, but the prospect of foreign producers capturing 20 percent of this U.S. market remains a problem. American companies can produce about 110 million tons annually at full capacity.

INVENTORIES

Inventories are building up, indicating a lack of consumer demand.

At Hesston Corp., in Hesston, Kan., Chairman Lyle E. Yost says most farm-gear makers can expect a carryover of 30 percent to 40 percent from 1977. At Hesston, it is even worse, with a carryover of nearly 70 percent expected.

Haven Newton, a vice president with Fieldcrest Mills of Eden, N.C., says inventories at that home-furnishings firm are being kept at minimum levels because of the economic woes plaguing that industry.

Steel producers expect that the high level of current inventories probably will result in stable prices through the first quarter, but that as inventories shrink, pressure will build for price increases. U.S. Steel has announced its intention to boost prices in the near future.

LOAN DEMAND

Overall, bankers expect an increase in loan demand in 1978.

John Bunting, president of First Pennsylvania Bank, says, "I'm thinking particularly of loans to business. Corporations, after the severe recession and the period during which they weren't spending much in new plant and equipment or inventory, have worked down their liquidity. They will have to borrow."

New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — President Carter has refused for the time being to commit additional money to help distressed cities because, in his view, his administration's experts in urban affairs have not yet developed a satisfactory urban policy, according to officials in the White House and elsewhere in the government.
Carter's decision, made at a meeting Tuesday evening, was interpreted one way by officials at the Department of Housing and Urban Development and another way by White House staff members who were present.

IN THE department, the prevailing view is that Carter and his principal advisers are unwilling to make the political and financial commitment that an urban policy statement written in the department would require.

The White House advisers said, however, that Carter felt the urban policy statement needed many refinements before he could make decisions based on it.

One adviser who was at the meeting Tuesday quoted Carter as saying, "Don't tell me we'll spend more money all around and then we'll call it an urban policy. Give me something worth funding if you want more money."

Carter's decision does not mean that no more money will be forthcoming for urban programs, the officials said. Rather, they said, Carter merely decided not to ask for additional sums for urban programs in the budget for the next fiscal year, which is now being put in final form and will be submitted to Congress Jan. 23.

IT IS possible, even probable, the officials said, that Carter will ask for a budget supplement when he outlines his urban policy in mid-March. They said, however, that the delay might jeopardize the prospects of congressional action on new proposals next year.

Last spring, Carter appointed a cabinet-level team, called the Urban and Regional Policy Group, to develop a policy for aiding cities. The group consists of representatives of six departments and is headed by Patricia Roberts Harris, the secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

Little was heard from the group until August. But after Vernon E. Jordan Jr., executive director of the Urban League, publicly charged Carter with reneging on his campaign promises to aid the cities, the group began to work urgently to develop a program for Carter's review.

LAST MONTH, the group prepared a 150-page draft report proposing an expansion and "targeting" of a number of federal programs in the hope of creating jobs and generating economic activity in older cities. The report also recommended greater cooperation between cities, suburbs, state and federal agencies to reverse policies that have accelerated urban decay. The only innovation is an "urban development bank" to encourage private investment in cities, although how such a bank would work was left unclear.

By most calculations, implementation of the report's recommendations would have cost $8 billion to $12 billion, far more than the White House is willing to spend.

A person who helped draft the report said it was always intended that there would be "a winnowing down once a basic policy was agreed on."

A key White House staff member said, however, he and his colleagues never understood that the

Urban aid must wait new policy

proposals would be pared down. Rather, he said, the report was viewed in the White House as a "laundry list" of programs that each cabinet department would like to spend money on.

The draft of the report was studied by Carter's domestic policy staff under the direction of Stuart E. Eizenstat, and a synopsis was given to Carter at Tuesday's session. One person at that meeting described the proposals as "bureaucratic logrolling" and as "a well thought-out, carefully devised plan to take whatever money was available and distribute it equally among existing programs."

It was, the adviser commented, "as if we had learned nothing in 10 years."

TOP OFFICIALS at the Department of Housing and Urban Development were described by a subordinate as "livid" at the way the matter had been presented to Carter.

On Wednesday, they wrote a 15-page memorandum containing what they believed to be the five basic points that should be included in an urban policy. The points were as follows:

—A substantial effort should be made to reduce unemployment in the core cities and to help those cities develop economically.

—Action should be taken to eliminate the disparity of services that makes living and working in the suburbs more attractive than in the cities.

—There should be increased housing subsidies and a revitalization of city neighborhoods.

—States and other governments in metropolitan areas should be given incentives to help cities solve their problems.

—The federal government should enact and enforce tougher equal opportunity and affirmative action programs to assist minorities.

That memorandum is now said to be on Carter's desk, but Carter's advisers said it did not answer his basic question. "He wants to know how to make existing programs work better before he starts making decisions on new ones," the White House staff member said.

New foray planned in coal strike

Associated Press

Striking members of the United Mine Workers union in Ohio said Saturday they'll make another foray into Kentucky this week to try to stop non-union coal production there.

Don Nunelley, an Ohio UMW leader, said at least 600 and perhaps as many as 2,000 Ohio strikers will move into eastern Kentucky on Tuesday.

A 100-vehicle caravan of striking coal miners, mostly from Ohio, traveled through eastern Kentucky early last week, picketing non-UMW mines. Caravan members stopped drivers from non-UMW coal mines and forced them to empty their trucks along roadsides.

About half the coal produced in Kentucky comes from non-UMW mines.

"If they're going to be peaceful, there's no problem," said Col. Les Pyles, operations commander of the Kentucky state police. "They generally, with a few exceptions, have been pretty peaceful so far."

"That's the way we want it," Nunelley said. "We will be peaceful. Any man that starts any violence will be sent home."

PYLES SAID no special alert would be in force.

"What forces we have generally are pretty much on the alert. We're pretty mobile," he said.

TV's blood lacks guts

By Jerry T. Baulch
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The bloodless way in which television action shows depict murder and mayhem misleads the public about the suffering and pain of violence, says a new study by the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

John Gunther, executive director of conference, said Saturday a study of police shows found they portray violence in an antiseptic manner with little "blood or guts."

Television characters usually die quickly and quietly or out of camera range, Gunther said.

The study focused on 73 hours of prime time TV action.

During the 73 hours, 648 weapons, 36 deaths and 41 injuries were flashed across the screen. There was an average of about one death for every two hours of viewing. Handguns were the most common weapon.

Accuracy was not the strong point of TV characters using guns, whether they were cops or robbers. Some 346 shots were counted, and only 17 percent hit their targets.

As many as 43 weapons — including clubs, knives, spearguns, bottles, wrenches, rocks, brass knuckles, and even a rolling pin and an ashtray — appeared in one hour's viewing, the report said.

While the study did not try to assess the impact of televised violence on viewers, it found that critics paint an exaggerated image of countless TV murders, replete with blood and gore.

"This represents distortion of the most serious nature," Gunther said. "Viewers must be made aware that pain, suffering and trauma result from a bullet or stab wound."

Gunther said "weapons seem to be used simply as props to advance the drama of the television program rather than the instruments of deadly force that they truly are."

Of the police shows monitored, "Hawaii Five O" led the list with an average of 20.3 weapons seen per show. "Starsky and Hutch" followed with 15, "Police Story" 13.8 and "Baretta" 12.5.

"Switch" had the fewest weapons, an average of two per show. "Quincy" followed with 2.5; one episode portrayed no weapons.

Handguns comprised 72 percent of all weapons seen and 79 percent of confrontations.

"Weapon users in confrontations were about evenly divided between police officers and bad guys—criminals," the report said.

But the police officers showed more restraint with weapons, threatening three more times than they actually fired them. In contrast, the make-believe criminals used their weapons more often than they simply threatened with them.

Suspect's escape revives rape fear

By Manuel Schiffres
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The women of Villa Ana lived in fear for a year. Some of them armed themselves and sealed the windows in their homes to protect themselves from an intruder who sexually assaulted 11 women in the suburban Louisville neighborhood and nearby.

In July, police charged a Jefferson County chiropractor with nine counts of first-degree rape and 31 related charges in the Villa Ana assaults. No more were reported, and the women set aside their fear.

Thursday night, the man accused of the Villa Ana rapes escaped from the Jefferson County Jail with three other inmates, and the nearly forgotten fears of the women of Villa Ana were revived.

"I was driving home with my teen-age daughter when we heard it on the radio," said Beth Cotten, 39. "I looked at her; she looked at me, and an uneasy feeling came over us."

She said there was

"general uneasiness" in the neighborhood when police said Ronnie F. Hood, 26, had escaped from jail. Hood had pleaded innocent to the rape charges and was awaiting trial, scheduled for Jan. 19.

Commonwealth's attorney David L. Armstrong said the trial was postponed once after Hood fired his first attorney. His new attorney asked that Hood undergo psychiatric examination. One examination was completed shortly before Hood escaped, Armstrong said.

A nationwide alert was put out, and the FBI was called into the search for Hood and two other escapees who remained at large on Saturday. One had been recaptured.

Jefferson County police said top priority had been put on Hood's apprehension, but they believed he and the others had fled the state.

Both Mrs. Cotten and a neighbor, 35-year-old Geneva Hutchinson, said it was likely the escapees left Kentucky. But they said the uncertainty sparked new fears.

'Women must be partners'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women must be treated as full and equal partners, not merely as a source of reproduction, if the world's birth rate is to be brought under control, a private research study said Saturday.

"If women do not have alternatives to motherhood, attitudes about family size are unlikely to change," Kathleen Newland, a senior researcher with Worldwatch Institute, wrote in the study, titled "Women and Population Growth: Choice Beyond Childbearing."

"In most countries, women who have access to education and rewarding jobs have fewer children than other women," she said.

There are many reasons for bearing children, including status, income, security and emotional satisfaction. But from the point of view of the local, national and global community, continued high fertility is a long-term recipe for disaster, the study said.

"THE AIM OF population policy, therefore, must be to reconcile the interests of the individual with those of the community," it added. "In order to do this for women, it is necessary to provide alternative sources of status, income, security and satisfaction."

Worldwatch Institute is a non-profit research body that focuses on global problems. It receives financial support from foundations, United Nations organizations and governmental units. It said Ms. Newland's conclusions did not necessarily reflect its own views.

In examining how to control population growth, the right approach is not how to prevent women from having large families, but rather how to encourage them to have small ones, the study said.

"Provision of contraceptive and abortion services is one part of this, but beyond that lies the far larger and more complex task of changing the social context in which decisions about childbearing are made," it said.

Employment offers women a higher degree of control over their own lives, it said, but employment policies should not try to keep women so busy that they do not have time for child-rearing.

"A sound policy must aim to expand women's choices, on the assumption that women are no more naturally inclined to limit themselves to motherhood than men are inclined to limit themselves to fatherhood," it said.

Police protest ends; Cleveland negotiates

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland patrolmen ended a two-day "blue flu" protest by returning to work Saturday as contract negotiations for the city and the Cleveland Police Patrolmen's Association held a five-hour session at the bargaining table.

"We had an extremely fruitful start to negotiations," said Dwight Miller, lawyer for the 1,500-member association, which presented a 95-page package of contract proposals Saturday.

No issues were resolved, but "the foundation is there; we expect to build on it," said William McNea, association president.

He said the climate of the talks was better than previous sessions, held before the sickout.

"There is a definite, marked improvement," he said. "There's no yelling in the halls."

James W. Barrett, Cleveland's safety director, said talks would resume Tuesday afternoon. Four sessions have been scheduled between then and Dec. 30, he said.

"They've got their positions, and we've got ours. At some point we'll come to an agreement," Barrett said.

Last April, city voters repealed an ordinance that provided automatic salary hikes for police officers and firefighters and guaranteed a salary 3 percent higher than that paid to members of any other big-city Ohio safety force.

The starting salary of a Cleveland patrolman is about $15,000. The association is seeking $18,500.

Secret Witness cases, rewards

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 77 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $52,500 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the caselist below, one of the selected and varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I.P.T. Secret Witness Editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge additional rewards to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

—A $1,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and manslaughter conviction of the hit-run driver whose pickup truck struck and killed Frank Sachs, 72, of Long Beach, as he was crossing Willow Street at Grand Avenue at 7:50 p.m. Nov. 16, 1977. The truck was described as a compact model, yellow or possibly other light color.

—A $1,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and armed robbery conviction of two violence-prone, shot-firing bandits who have beaten, choked and pistol-whipped employees and patients during a series of holdups of doctors' offices throughout the Long Beach area since July 1977. The bandits are described as a "Mutt and Jeff" (one tall, one short) team of black men.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killers of Compton restaurant manager Roger Heninger, 32, shot to death in his office at the Sizzler restaurant, 1715 N. Bullis Road, during a robbery by two gunmen at 10 p.m. July 22, 1977.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Adrian Pace Jr., 17, shot to death in front of his Elm Street apartment in Long Beach during an altercation with two unknown suspects at 10:25 p.m. June 24, 1977.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Camilla Stassi, 20-year-old coed found raped and stabbed to death in her Long Beach apartment in the 500 block of W. Eighth St. on the night of Jan. 17, 1977.

—A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and robbery conviction of two masked bandits who held up the manager and clerk at Eddie's Liquor Store, 301 Market St., at 7 a.m. on April 25, 1977, and fled with the loot in the manager's car.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Antonio Magallon, 39, shot to death by unknown assailants following an argument outside his Wilmington home in the 100 block of West D Street at 11:30 p.m. on April 1, 1977.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 33-year-old Henry Quezada, of Compton, shot and killed by an unknown assailant as he was changing a tire on his car at Acacia and Rosecrans avenues in Compton at 9:30 p.m. on Dec. 31, 1976.

—A $500 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest of fugitive Samuel Law, 23, formerly of Compton, sought in connection with the slaying of Lavern Speer, 50, who was shot to death execution-style before the eyes of his wife and young son after two bandits accosted them as they were getting out of their car in a parking lot next to their Elm Avenue apartment at 7:15 p.m. on Nov. 2, 1976. If a murder conviction results from the arrest, the informant will be eligible for an additional $1,500 reward.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the street robber who shot and fatally wounded 72-year-old Jeanette Glade, of Long Beach, while attempting to take her purse on Burnett Street near Pasadena Avenue at 8:30 p.m. on Aug. 8, 1976. Mrs. Glade died as a result of her wound.

How you can be a paid Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret. You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone (213) 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90814.

Heroin dealer found guilty

FRESNO (AP) — A Delano man has been found guilty by a federal jury here of distributing heroin, and of conspiracy.

Jose Sanchez Molina, 21, was one of three Delano men authorities said arranged to sell 11 ounces of heroin to an undercover agent at a freeway restaurant here in July.

Molina was the supplier and was to have received $11,000 for the transaction, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Anthony Capozzi.

Programmed into this microscopic data bank is an almost inconceivable amount of information that spells out the biological and chemical functions of life. A single thread of DNA located in a single human cell may contain as much information as 1,000 books, each 600 pages thick. A teaspoon of DNA taken from a single bacteria has been equated to the storage capacity of a modern computer 100 cubic miles in volume.

ALL OF THESE bits of DNA information are crucial instructions that determine everything from the color of your eyes and the numbers of toes and fingers, to the size of the brain. And it is these bits of genetic data that molecular biologists are learning to read. Once having learned the "letters" of this alphabet, they ultimately will be able to write.

Dr. Charles Price, former president of the American Chemical Association, hypothesizes that since the "DNA language on the simplest one-cell organism is exactly the same DNA language that duplicates a human being," then that one cell may have become "the progenitor of all life on earth."

For the genetic engineer, that is a heady thought. It means, simply, that the Biological Revolution, with its ability to manufacture and alter DNA information, stands in command of both the evolutionary past and future. No modification of any life form is outside the eventual technological capability of the new genetics.

We have already progressed to the point, says Dr. Robert Sinheimer, chairman of the biology department of the California Institute of Technology, where genetic engineering "makes available to us the gene pool of the planet — all of the genes developed in the varied evolutionary lines throughout the history of life — to reorder and reassemble as we see fit."

IT ALL BEGAN over three billion years ago, in the primordial "soup" of the ocean. Something happened — cosmic radiation, perhaps, or tremendous electrical sparks — that caused inorganic gases and chemicals to come together and form life. At first, the organisms were barely on the edge of the living — bacteria and algae. But since that time, the rules of the game have remained the same: life growing and evolving, becoming increasingly complex, rising higher on the evolutionary scale through critical mutations in genes.

The awesome slowness of the process is difficult to comprehend. For 2½ billion years, these simple life forms were all that existed in the life-sustaining water. Then 600 million years ago, the first invertebrates — forerunners of jelly fish, sponges, worms and snails — began to take shape from the bacteria and algae.

Another 150 million years passed before fish and other vertebrates appeared. Fifty million years later, another development burst forth: fish began to grow jawbones, making them the first creatures capable of actually biting other life forms to eat.

More important, (from our perspective on the evolutionary ladder, at least) a new type of life, the lungfish, emerged. Capable of breathing air outside the water, and blessed with muscled fins that could be used for walking, these lungfish eventually left the ocean to explore the land.

Next came amphibians, 350 million years ago. Then came the reptiles — snakes, lizards, crocodiles, turtles: their skin mutating into scaly hardness to permit survival in drier climates.

After them the dinosaurs, those 70-foot long, 85-ton behemoths, roamed the land, dominating the world for 150 million years. Next, the age of the mammals, a new life form adapted to a drying and cooling climate, a climate that spelled extinction for the dinosaur.

Finally, just 2.5 million years ago, our closest ancestors, prehistoric man, emerged. Not until 35,000 B.C. did "modern man" appear. More than 30,000 years later, what we call civilization began to take hold.

OVER THE PAST three billion years, 100 million species have existed on this planet. Ninety eight million are now extinct. Among the two million that remain today, only one, homo sapiens (or "wise man"), is potentially able to control and harness its own evolutionary future.

Many biologists welcome the possibility, seeing it as a great challenge that will ennoble and preserve our species.

"Modern progress in microbiology and genetics suggests that man can outwit extinction through genetic engineering," says Cal Tech biologist James Bonner.

"Genetic change is not basically immoral. It takes place all the time, naturally. What man can do, however, is make sure that these changes are no longer random in the gigantic genetic lottery of nature. Instead, he can control the changes to produce better individuals."

Bonner's view is seconded by Dr. Joseph Fletcher, professor of medical ethics at the University of Virginia School of Medicine, who sees in genetic engineering the fulfillment of our cosmic role on earth.

"To be men," he believes, "We must be in control. That is the first and last ethical word."

A third scientist promises that our newly developed eugenic potential will lead humanity to "a growth of social wisdom and glorious survival — toward the evolution of a kind of superman."

But what, the dissenter might ask, constitutes a "superman"? Who will decide on what traits and attitudes these "better individuals" will have?

Who among us will be in control of securing our evolutionary future, and the evolutionary future of other animals and plants that will be genetically engineered? And how can we be sure that in our tinkering and fixing with three billion years of natural evolutionary wisdom, we do not inadvertently join the other 98 million species that have passed from the earth?

THREE DECADES ago, scientists split the atom and used that energy to make the first atomic bomb. The bomb unleashed a terrifying amount of destructive energy.

Then came other uses for the atom — electrical energy, pacemakers for heart patients ... the new science became commonplace.

Now, science is making another major foray into the public consciousness.

Restriction enzymes, plasmids and recombinant DNA have been created. It could easily be as destructive a force as was the atomic bomb ... man-made forms of life.

Next Sunday: Recombinant DNA: A potential monster.

First couple ordained together

By Robert Towasson
 New York Times Service

DANBURY, Conn. — Ann and Michael Coburn were ordained Saturday morning as Episcopal priests, becoming the first married couple in the nation to be ordained together into the priesthood.

With tears streaming down their faces, the couple, both 28 years old, took the vows that were administered by the Rt. Rev. John B. Coburn, Episcopal bishop of Massachusetts and father of Michael Coburn.

It was a ceremony that was striking in its mix of innovation and tradition and in light of the controversy that has wracked the Episcopal Church since its general convention voted in September 1976 to admit women into the priesthood.

Mrs. Coburn became the 90th woman to be admitted into the priesthood and the first woman admitted in Connecticut. A married couple had never before been ordained together into the priesthood, according to Walter Boyd, a spokesman for the 2.8-million member church.

When Bishop Coburn asked the 300 people who had gathered in St. James Church "if any of you know any impediment or crime because of which we should not proceed, come forward now and make it known," the Rev. William D. Loring, rector of St. John's Church in Sandy Hook, Conn., rose from a pew at the front of the church.

"I am most reluctant to speak for three reasons," the minister said.

"I have come to feel both respect and affection for Ann Coburn. It is not my nature to seek out controversy, and I do not expect to alter the course of today's events.

"I am convinced that Ann Coburn's womanhood is, in fact, an impediment to priesthood," Loring added.

Bishop Coburn then thanked the minister for his "dignified" objection and proceeded with the ordination of his son and daughter-in-law.

For the 63-year-old bishop, the ceremony had an added element of emotional reminiscence. He had been baptized and later confirmed in the church by his father, the Rev. Aaron Coburn, who was rector of St. James from 1913 to 1928.

In a resounding voice, his face glistening with tears, Bishop Coburn asked the couple before him: "My sister and brother, do you believe that you are truly called by God and His Church to this priesthood?"

In unison, the couple replied: "I believe I am called."

Married couple ordained as priests

As they knelt to receive the priestly vows and then rose and kissed Bishop Coburn, the congregation broke into spontaneous applause.

"Is there a dry eye in the house?" the Rev. Dr. P. Graham Luckenbill, rector of St. James, asked the congregation as the newly ordained priests hugged members of their families and other priests, including the Rev. Carol Anderson, the first woman to be ordained into the church in New York.

Before the ceremony, Luckenbill said he had initially been opposed to the ordination of women.

"But Ann Coburn was so captivating, we just melted," he said.

Ann Coburn, the former Ann Struthers of Rye, N. Y., met Michael when they were 16 at a religious conference at the Wooster School in Danbury, where he was a student. The school, affiliated with the Episcopal Church, was founded by Michael's grandfather — the father of Bishop Coburn.

Michael Coburn graduated from Princeton University and Ann Coburn from Georgian Court College in Lakewood, N. J. They were married in 1970 and attended the Church Divinity School of the Pacific in Berkeley, Calif., and graduated last June.

After their graduation from divinity school, the couple, who have no children, worked as deacons at St. James, where they will continue as assistant rectors to Luckenbill. St. James, which has almost 3,000 members, is the second-largest Episcopal church in New England, according to the rector. Christ Church in Greenwich, Conn., is the largest, he said.

"We'll be continuing as before," Mrs. Coburn said as she stood with her husband in the courtyard of the stone Gothic church after the ceremony. "Of course now we can celebrate Holy Communion, absolve sins, give blessings and perform marriages."

"We love the work we are doing and hope to continue," she added.

'Life' of death plane

For 36 years, N51071 lumbered through the skies of the United States and Canada, a workhorse of commerce and war. This DC-3 was a plane loved by its owners, ranging from General Motors to Hawkeye Airlines. Comfortable, reliable and safe. Those years ended when it dropped out of the fog into an Indiana hillside Tuesday night, killing its last 29 passengers. The story of N51071 was reconstructed from official records and interviews with those who flew it.

PLANE THAT CRASHED KILLING 29 ONCE WAS PART OF HAWKEYE AIRLINES FLEET.

violations of agency rules. Agency spokesmen said the plane had been flown for 9,500 hours since its last major airframe overhaul, well below the 12,000-hour limit for such maintenance. The left engine had been operated 789 hours since its last overhaul, and the right engine 509 hours. Engines must be overhauled every 1,300 hours, the FAA says.

The pilot of the plane, Ty Van Pham, a Vietnamese refugee, held the FAA's highest pilot rating and had 9,100 hours total flight time, including 4,400 hours in DC-3s.

With its president and general manager among the victims, National Jet Service announced it was shutting down indefinitely. It had a fleet of four DC-3s and a LearJet.

By Howard Benedict and Evans Witt
Associated Press

For 36 years, the DC-3 plied the skies, bearing captains of industry and infantry, athletes and Iowa farmers, uncoupled thousands of passengers. Since 1941, N51071 had recorded more than two years of flight time until its log was halted in tragedy at 19,977.2 hours.

With its last 29 passengers on board, Douglas Aircraft DC-3, serial number 4837, took off from the Evansville, Ind., airport Tuesday night.

WITHIN minutes, a fiery crash had scattered the plane and the bodies of the University of Evansville basketball team, its coach and 11 others across a muddy bluff above railroad tracks.

In 36 years, the DC-3 had flown all over the United States and into Canada for the U.S. Army, General Motors, Michigan Tech, Sellstrom Manufacturing, Hawkeye Airlines and Fontana Aviation.

Those who remembered N51071 — the number painted on its mustard-yellow tail — recalled it fondly.

"It was a superfine plane," said Mark Fontana, whose Fontana Aviation of Kingsford, Mich., cared for or owned it for years.

When it dropped out of the fog onto the Indiana hillside, N51071 had been flown for less than many DC-3s. It's not unusual for a DC-3 to have logged 50,000 hours.

Top executives of General Motors flew it to inspect plants, talk with bankers and go to conventions.

A PROFESSIONAL hockey team from Sioux City, Iowa, took it to Canada for minor league games.

It ferried Iowans from Ottumwa to Marshalltown and on to Des Moines and Omaha.

This DC-3 began life in 1941 at the Douglas Aircraft plant in Santa Monica. Its destiny, so the builders thought, was to become a workhorse of commercial airline travel.

Instead, it almost immediately was "pressed into military service," says a cryptic notation in records of the Federal Aviation Administration.

The Air Force says its records don't go back far enough to reveal what this particular DC-3 did during World War II.

Its 10,200 brethren — called C-47s in military parlance — have performed in every American war since, from flying to China over "The Hump" from Burma in 1943 to carrying weapons of death as the feared gunships in Vietnam known as "Puff the Magic Dragon."

WITH THE END of the war, N51071 was turned over to the Reconstruction Finance Corp., a federal agency that handled disposal of surplus military equipment. On Sept. 14, 1945, it was sold to General Motors for $80,000.

GM spokesman Phil Workman said the plane was one of several the company used over the years for its executives.

"It was a company airplane used for company business," he said. "We don't have anyone still around who could supply any specifics."

Fontana said it was a most comfortably outfitted craft.

"It had a galley, a lounge area, divans and lights, lights like you have in your home," he said.

On May 22, 1967, GM gave the plane to Michigan Tech, a university located in Houghton on the state's isolated but beautiful Upper Peninsula.

Dr. Raymond Smith, then and now the university president, has fond memories of N51071.

"IT WAS such a beautiful plane. It was so comfortable. . . . But it burned a lot of gasoline," he said. "The thing I thought was the greatest part about it was its safety."

Smith was surprised to learn the plane that crashed was the same as the one his school had owned, because he had thought of using it to transport the school's nationally known hockey team.

"I looked at that airplane for transporting our athletic teams. But the cost of conversion would be too much. All I can say is that, thank God, I didn't convert it and use it for our team."

Smith said the plane was used to fly school officials around the region for fund raising, meetings in Lansing, the state capital, and for educational conferences.

Fontana Aviation maintained the plane and provided pilots for the school.

Mark Fontana said the university didn't use the plane often.

"THE AIRPLANE just sat and sat and sat. . . . It cost an arm and a leg to operate," he said. "And Tech just flew three or four people around at a time."

When the school decided to get rid of the plane, it asked Fontana to act as broker.

Fontana found a buyer. Sellstrom Manufacturing of Canada bought the plane on June 10, 1970, for about $40,000, and five days later executed a lease-purchase agreement with Barrington Optical Co. of Barrington, Ill.

This transaction was really a deal between two subsidiaries of the same company, Sellstrom Manufacturing of Palatine, Ill.

Roger Sellstrom, president of the parent company, which makes protective equipment for workers, said the plane was used for various company purposes such as flying to plants in Ironwood, Mich., and Montreal, Canada. And the company tried to charter it out, but that effort was a flop.

"IT WAS a grand aircraft," Sellstrom said. Asked if there were any problems, he replied: "Absolutely none. I wish my car ran as well."

As it had for Michigan Tech, Fontana's company maintained the plane for Sellstrom.

"They didn't use it much. It would sit for six weeks without flying at all," Fontana said.

When Sellstrom decided to sell the plane, Fontana bought it in 1973.

"It was a superfantastic airplane when we first saw it and it was in the same condition when it left," Fontana said. "We didn't have any problems."

On April 16, 1974, Fontana sold the plane to Bernie Junior, who represented Ed Basler Flight Service of Oshkosh, Wis.

Basler converted N51071 from a luxury craft to a 28-seat passenger plane for Hawkeye Airlines of Ottumwa, Iowa. Hawkeye paid about $80,000 for the plane on Sept. 27, 1974.

HAWKEYE owned one other DC-3 that also carried commuter passengers from Ottumwa to Marshalltown, Iowa; Des Moines; Omaha; Sioux City, Iowa, and back to Ottumwa.

"We didn't use the new plane too much; it was mainly a spare," recalls J.P. Strother, an Ottumwa construction company executive, who was on Hawkeye's board of directors before the firm went out of business in December 1975.

He said the plane also was used for a few charter flights, including "flying the Sioux City hockey team to Canada a couple times."

N51071 was sold to its final owner, National Jet Service of Indianapolis, on March 31, 1976, for about $72,000.

Officials of National Jet have been reluctant to discuss anything about the aircraft since the tragedy in Evansville.

Clifton Martin, operations manager of the company, did say the firm flew charters carrying athletic teams, including the Indiana Pacers of the National Basketball Association and the basketball teams of Purdue and Indiana universities.

The FAA said National Jet had a good record and had never been cited for

55mph speed drive slows down

Drivers step on it as government ponders enforcement

By Reginald Stuart
New York Times Service

OLYMPIA, Wash. — Mona Clark has a driving problem that is becoming a chronic one among motorists throughout the nation.

When driving her blue 1970 Ford Galaxy on the highways of Washington, she has a growing tendency to exceed the 55mph speed limit.

"I'll go over the limit a little when I'm in a hurry," she said.

It is an answer given by other drivers, here and all over the country, who have found that they are spending more and more on each day on the highways because of the limitation.

A recent federal study of the speed limit, which was enacted in January 1974 by a government grasping for ways to reduce the consumption of gasoline during the energy crisis, has found that the federal observance of the lower limit is evident in 1974 and 1975 has been steadily increasing since 1973.

IT ALSO found that more and more states — some never convinced that the fuel shortage was not contrived, others hard-pressed to justify emphasis on the speed law compared with other priorities — have been relaxing penalties for violations.

The study, by the Department of Transportation, also concluded that the government had made a good-faith effort to persuade the public to observe the law, but that it had not been very successful.

"The 55mph speed limit has proved its effectiveness, but it is in danger of losing its punch," Transportation Secretary Brock Adams said in a recent speech in Los Angeles to the 84th annual conference of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

AMONG the developments cited in the department's "Report to the President on Compliance with the 55mph Speed Limit" were the following:

—After dropping significantly in 1974 and remaining at lower levels in 1975, highway speeds began rising again. In 1976, the average speed of "free flowing" vehicles was 58 mph on rural interstate highways and 56 mph on urban interstates, compared with 57.5 mph and 54.7 mph, respectively, in 1975.

—In the first half of 1977, the percentage of vehicles exceeding the 55 mph limit ranged by state from 30.5 percent in Virginia to 77 percent in Connecticut and Wyoming. The percentage of vehicles exceeding 60 mph ranged from 7.5 percent to 40 percent.

—Since the establishment of the limit in 1974, nine states have increased their penalties for violations of the law, but seven have reduced their penalties. Furthermore, legislatures in four other states adopted laws this year weakening speed-limit penalties, although all were vetoed by their governors.

"A trend toward lower penalties has become evident this year," the report said.

FEDERAL and state authorities who support the 55mph limit say they are not sure now what approach should be taken to reverse the trend.

A move to compromise at 60mph is still relatively modest, so some final efforts at compliance with the current law are afoot at the federal and state levels.

Adams has asked Congress to approve some $40 million in the Highway Safety Act of 1978 for stepped-up enforcement of the limit. Giving more funds to the states for enforcement has been chosen as the most promising option, rather than withholding funds from states that do not show they are trying to enforce the law. Aid to the states, however, would be contingent on their setting goals to meet the federal government's goal of getting 85 percent of the vehicles on the road to comply with the limit.

Meanwhile, a few states, such as Washington, have also decided recently to make one more attempt at compliance.

"Enforcing the 55 can be likened to enforcing Prohibition," said Walter M. Friel, director of the Washington Traffic Safety Commission.

"I figure the law is the law, and if little things like the speed law go unchecked, what does that do to murders and rapes? We do find that not only are we saving energy, but also the saving of lives is apparent."

Friel then outlined his state's plan, which is considered one of the more aggressive ones announced in many months in connection with the limit. The cost to taxpayers for equipment alone is $180,000.

By year's end, the state plans to have in operation five radar-controlled overhead signs on highways that tell approaching motorists how fast they are going.

"Your speed is —" the signs will announce in 14-inch-high numbers. There may be a highway patrol officer watching, and there may not be.

Also, 30 "buzz boxes" will be placed in areas of the state where speeding has been a problem. The portable, solar-powered devices will emit radar-like signals to "fool" drivers who use sophisticated radar detection devices to determine where highway patrol details are. Again, troopers may be in the area, and they may not be.

Portable jails have been acquired to facilitate arrests on the spot and reduce booking time to about 30 minutes from about 4 hours, and an ambitious publicity program will again be tried.

"To enforce it you put on more force, more shock troops," said Friel. "But, very frankly, we don't have an answer."

Stepped-up terrorism feared

It could be nuclear blackmail, poisoning of water. . .

Dennis Redmont
Associated Press

SIRACUSA, Italy — Terrorists soon may use nuclear blackmail, poison water supplies or take over power plants unless new ways are found to combat such acts, American participants warned at a world crime seminar that ended Saturday.

"Terrorist targets are now going to change," said Ved P. Nanda, director of international legal studies at the University of Denver. "Nuclear blackmail, poisoning of water works, takeover of energy and power sources — these are the things that no one knows how to deal with."

"IT'S NO longer a question of if, but a question of when," he told the conference, entitled "Perspectives on Terrorism." It was held at the International Institute of Higher Studies in Criminal Sciences in this Sicilian city.

Cherif Bassiouni, a law professor at Chicago's De Paul University who advises the State Department on international crime, drew up a list of the most dramatic and harmful actions terrorists could take.

He pointed to targets of "high vulnerability, not adequately protected and with a high emotional and terror-inspiring effect."

Bassiouni mentioned water pump and filtration systems, nuclear reactors, offshore drilling platforms, fuel storage facilities, dams and government headquarters. He also listed the theft or use of nuclear weapons.

Most of the experts were at a loss to outline successful countermeasures against politically motivated criminals. One participant acknowledged:

"One man's terrorism is another man's heroism."

Participants from Western countries rejected a suggestion that the death penalty automatically be imposed for terrorist crimes.

"It tends to make martyrs of the executed persons and this brings sympathy to the deceased and to his or her government," Bassiouni said.

Yet attempts at rehabilitation are doomed since most terrorists are anarchists who want to destroy the society they are fighting, the experts said, and the effectiveness of imprisonment is limited.

Participants noted a surge of interest in finding ways to combat terrorism in the Soviet Union and other East European nations who are beginning to admit their own problems with terrorists.

Valeri Shupilov, director of the foreign law section of the Soviet Union's Institute of Crime Prevention, presented a report on airplane hijacking, listing five known skyjackings in his country.

Media coverage of terrorist crimes also was discussed by the conferees, who recommended avoiding live broadcasts of terrorist acts in progress. The U.S. media was praised for taking the lead in trying to establish guidelines for such coverage.

Some experts suggested establishing forums to allow terrorists to air their grievances without having to resort to violence.

Many nations afflicted with terrorism advocated new "short-hand" or "concealed" methods of extraditing the criminals to their countries of origin to avoid lengthy court delays. Other participants denounced the suggestion as a civil rights violation.

International agreements were considered only partly effective. The European Convention on Terrorism, for example, has been signed by 17 of 19 countries but few parliaments have ratified it.

"All this means that we will have to tolerate terrorism like we tolerate air pollution," Bassiouni said. "But the problem remains that each day the testing of the threshold becomes higher and higher."

Abduction wave hits Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The wave of kidnappings for ransom in Colombia, 84 this year and eight in the past week, has surpassed even the thriving abduction business in Italy and has prompted government plans for a special anti-terrorist commando unit.

At least 21 persons are believed still in the hands of kidnappers, including Richard Starr, 30, of Washington, D.C., an American Peace Corps volunteer. Starr was captured 10 months ago by a guerrilla group during a raid on a town 80 miles southeast of Bogota.

Authorities say this week's upsurge in abductions apparently is aimed at families the kidnappers know will be willing to pay more just to get their loved ones back in time for Christmas.

Most of the kidnappings are conducted by gangs of common criminals using terrorist methods, officials say.

In Italy, where kidnapping for ransom has become almost a way of life in the country of 56 million, there have been 71 abductions so far this year by what is commonly called "Kidnapping Inc."

Colombia's population is 27 million, less than half that of Italy, but it has experienced 13 more abductions this year.

President Alfonso Lopez Michelsen, addressing Congress on Friday just hours after the murder of a prominent businessman and the abduction of two others in Bogota, said the commando group will include personnel from several federal police departments.

Therapists look at family to treat mental problems

By Terry Kirkpatrick
AP News Features

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The problem: the child was a nervous wreck, so trembly and unable to function that the school recommended he be placed in a special home.

The psychiatrist's prescription: the boy's father should spend all day planning how to criticize his wife's cooking.

The improbable link between classroom trouble and dinnertime battle was made by Dr. Lyman Wynne, a leading practitioner of a relatively new form of psychotherapy called family therapy.

DR. WYNNE and a few other psychiatrists working independently first experimented with family therapy several decades ago, but it was not until recent years that its popularity began to grow.

"It used to be considered strictly a specialty within psychotherapy," says Dr. Ray Fowler, executive director of the American Association of Marriage and Family Counselors. "Increasingly in the last decade, it has become a field of its own."

He says the interest is due to increasing strains on the American family: the rising divorce rate, awareness of the impact of divorce on children, new attitudes toward the role of women in the home.

"It's clear from the popularity of workshops and presentations on family approaches that a great many people are keenly interested and involved," says Dr. Wayne, a professor of psychiatry at the University of Rochester School of Medicine. "It's been very difficult to keep up with the demand for training."

IN TRADITIONAL psychotherapy, the doctor works with one patient. Studying his psychic history for a key to emotional disorder. In family therapy, the doctor meets with the family as a group and examines the way they act toward each other.

"It's a different orientation," Dr. Wynne says. "You're looking at the relationship between people rather than what they imagine are their individual anxieties."

The assumption of most family therapists is that if there is a long-standing relationship between a person with psychiatric symptoms and others in the family, the others will be affected.

In the classroom-dinner table case, for instance, the child's problems at school were traced to his parents' troubled marriage which was heading for a divorce.

Family problems like this often churn in a spiral: the child has trouble because his parents have trouble; the parents try to help the child but make things worse; the parents become more upset and their troubles grow.

"ONE OF the principles of family therapy is to get away from the notion of linear cause and effect," Dr. Wynne says.

That's where meeting with the family is good. If you meet with just one person, you may perpetuate the spiral by not being able to see how each person is affecting the others."

To break the spiral, Dr. Wynne looks for a specific, recurring interaction among family members, such as bickering over dinner, that can be changed soon after therapy starts.

"One of the problems with a lot of therapy is that it goes on so long people lose sight of why they came and lose their sense of progress. In family therapy, we deal with something people would really like to have different and then help them make it different fairly quickly."

"They become confident, hopeful and have better morale. That in itself will change things. It's a different approach from talking about the total personality and working down to specifics."

Families in need of therapy usually don't notice how they deal with each other. Sometimes it's necessary for Dr. Wynne to visit the home and watch the family in action. At other times, the difficulties play themselves out as the family sits in his office.

In the classroom-dinner table case, the father was not aware that his conversation and actions at dinner, such as shoving the plate aside, implied harsh criticism of his wife's cooking. He was surprised and hurt when she responded in rage.

To help them see what was going on, Dr. Wynne used a technique called "prescribing the symptom," an effort to make the problem so obvious that they couldn't miss it. The husband was told to plan his criticism ahead of time. The wife was told to hold back for awhile, then unleash an exaggerated fury.

What happened was typical. The whole thing broke down at the first step.

"They came in sheepishly the next week. When he tried to do this voluntarily he got so self-conscious about it that he stopped. They're getting along much better, and the whole sequence has been modified. They're noticing what they were doing to each other and what they could do to relieve it."

This dinner table game, worked out after only a few hours of talking with the family, became the turning point, the first positive step toward an improved relationship.

"This sequence was only part of the total problem, but it was crucial in reversing this circular process. It's so trivial in one sense that it had gotten lost in the face of tremendous conflict and demoralization, in which they were both feeling they were lousy parents."

After three or four sessions, the parents said they no longer wanted to talk about their problems. They wanted to concentrate on their child.

"From the treatment standpoint, it's not necessary to understand the whole jigsaw puzzle all the time," Dr. Wynne says. "Sometimes it's a matter of sizing up what works, identifying a simple procedure."

There are other instances, however, and this is where the therapist gets into it, as contrasted to the bartender or the marriage counselor or Dear Abby, where you need to use uncommon sense."

Prescribing the symptom is an example of uncommon sense. How many psychiatrists practice family therapy isn't known. Many who usually work with individual patients may meet with the entire family if they consider it appropriate. Others consider the role of their patients in the family without actually meeting with other family members, which Dr. Wynne says is more aptly termed "family orientation" than family therapy.

...Low prices on turkey and ham for Christmas.

We've worked with our suppliers to bring prices down on your two favorite holiday dishes, turkey and ham. And we still have yams and cranberry sauce on Key Buy savings... as well as a variety of other trimmings. So as you prepare to deck your halls (and tables) for the holidays, remember us. Making your Christmas budget go further is what discount is all about.

Tips on baking a perfect ham:

Place ham on a rack in a shallow roasting pan. Insert meat thermometer in the thickest part. Do not add water, or cover. Bake in a slow oven (325°) until done:

Cut	Internal Thermometer Temperature	Weight, in Pounds	Approx. Total Cooking Time (Hours)
Fully cooked boneless ham	140 F	3 to 4 5 to 7	1 1/2 to 1 3/4 2 to 2 1/2
Bone-in fully cooked ham	140 F	10 to 13 13 to 16	3 to 3 1/2 3 1/2 to 4
Canned hams	140 F	3 to 7 7 to 10	1 1/2 to 2 2 to 2 1/2

Once-proud Laker-Celt feud renews

By Doug Ives
Staff Writer

For more than a decade, one of the fiercest and most exciting rivalries in the National Basketball Association matched the Lakers against the Boston Celtics.

The teams battle again tonight at the Forum, but, seemingly, the magic is gone. The Celtics lead only the New Jersey Nets in the Eastern Division with a 10-16 record and the Lakers bring up the rear in the Pacific Division with an 11-17 mark.

While the Lakers have suffered injuries, a suspension, and have made a big trade, the Celtics have stood pat to psych each other by recalling their great winning tradition, but it hasn't helped.

Veteran guard Jo Jo White has been critical of coach Tommy Heinsohn, and it is reported that the principal owner of the franchise has asked general manager Red Auerbach to return as coach. Now in his ninth year, Heinsohn has won two NBA titles and 471 games.

They have been no complaints lodged against Laker coach Jerry West except by himself. He takes the blame along with his two assistant coaches for not finding the right combination to produce a winner. The Lakers have lost 10 of their last 15 games.

Invincible at the Forum last year, the Lakers have an 8-8 record at home this season.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY

Equal opportunity distributorship for men & women

- $4,295. minimum investment
- Fast Moving products
- Unlimited growth potential
- Complete training program

Sessions dies in snow mishap

SAM SESSIONS
Racing vet killed

ALEXANDRIA, Minn. (AP) — Sam Sessions, 42, a veteran of 19 years of professional racing, was killed Saturday in a single-machine snowmobile racing accident.

Sessions was racing in the SnoPro professional racing event when the accident occurred.

Sessions, of Barlow Lake, Mich., was one of the top sprint car drivers in U.S. Auto Club racing for many years and captured the sprint car national championship in 1972. A veteran of 60 USAC championship races, Sessions had been racing professionally on snowmobiles for the past several years.

Sessions participated in seven Indianapolis 500 races, finishing in the top 10 twice. His best finish was a fourth in 1972. His last appearance in the Indianapolis race was in 1975, when he finished 17th, dropping out with 45 laps to go due to engine failure.

His last competition in USAC events was in sprint races early last year before he switched to snowmobiles.

The accident occurred during elimination heats in the 440-class. A race official said Sessions was nearly one-half length of the track ahead of the nearest sled when his machine went off the track on a turn into a wooded area beyond the wall.

L.B. Rockets, Chapman vie at Blair Field

Weather permitting, the Long Beach Rockets will entertain the Chapman All-Stars at Blair Field today at noon.

The game is starting 90 minutes earlier than usual because the Rams have reserved the field for loosening up drills at 3 p.m.

Third-baseman Doug Stodgel was the hitting star last week as the Rockets blanked San Fernando Valley, 7-0. Stodgel, a Chicago Cub farmhand who played Triple A ball with Wichita this past season, had three doubles and three runs-batted-in.

Craig Gioia will open on the mound for the Rockets today with Randy Vanderhook behind the plate.

LIFE/STYLE—L/S-1

Film star recalls life as cowboy

By Kathy
Cairns
Staff Writer

In a world of Hollywood make believe, Tim McCoy was always the real thing.

In addition to being one of Hollywood's original Western stars in its silent era, as well as its heyday, he has been a cowboy, a rancher, an Indian expert, U.S. Cavalry officer, adjutant general of Wyoming and the star of his own Wild West show.

He is best known, however, for his starring roles on the silver screen.

His hair is a little whiter now, his step a little less steady, but otherwise McCoy is virtually unchanged from the days he rode the range as a celluloid hero.

He has just published, with his son, Ron, an autobiography, "Tim McCoy Remembers the West" (Doubleday, $8.95), recounting his adventures and devotion to an ambience which exists today only in folklore. The book is filled with personal reminiscences of some of history's most notorious characters and some of its unsung heroes.

In a recent interview he spoke of his experiences and of the people he has known. McCoy, who pioneered the all-black cowboy outfit on screen, later used by Bill Boyd as "Hopalong Cassidy," was dressed in a light jacket and casual slacks. His wry humor and the gracious manner which endeared him to friends and fans alike, has been preserved.

"Buffalo Bill — he was one of the most impressive, remarkable gentlemen I have ever known. I met him for the first time as a child when he was touring in his Wild West show. I was so shaken, I was speechless. Later, I renewed my acquaintance with him several times as an adult. I never lost my profound admiration for him.

"Wyatt Earp — his legend is far greater than the professional gambler he really was. Bat Masterson was a tinnhorn gambler. Fellows like him wore badges to give them the excuse to kill people.

"I met Ernest Hemingway during World War II in Europe. He always carried two canteens with him — one filled with apple brandy and the other with martinis."

IN HIS EARLY years as a Wyoming cowboy, McCoy worked some of the same ranches the Sundance Kid had previously worked. "I didn't know him, but worked with some of his gang members. Sundance's name, contrary to what most people have been told, was actually Harry Lonabaugh, not Longbaugh.

"I was also acquainted with Joe LaFors, the man credited with ending the Wild Bunch's train robbing days in the U.S. He wasn't the one responsible though."

According to McCoy, Tim Kellerher, a special agent for the Union Pacific Railroad actually stopped the gang. It was Kellerher, he said, who converted a baggage car into a stable, bunkhouse and armory on rails. With this car and a flying squadron of four skilled gunmen, he made it impossible for the Wild Bunch to continue operation.

Other myths miff McCoy as well. "Contrary to popularly accepted lore, you never knew hired gunmen were around. You heard rumors, but the hired men didn't come riding into town, shooting up everything in sight. They were very quiet, surveying the scene, then making their moves at just the right moment.

"There were also very few showdowns of the kind depicted on television and in late movies. Gunmen didn't walk 10 paces, turn and shoot simultaneously. Most of the time victims were dry-gulched — shot in the back."

McCoy takes exception to the way range cowboys have been depicted through the years. "I have never seen a television or movie cowboy who took pride in his appearance. When real cowboys rode into a town they were dressed very cleanly.

"We were proud of our hats and boots and the rest of our outfits," he said. "If we came to town looking like bums, the town marshal asked us to leave by the next train."

SOME OF MCCOY'S better-known films include "The Covered Wagon," on which he served as technical advisor, "War Paint," "Two Fisted Law," "End of the Trail," "Silent Men," "The Frontiersman" and "Winners of the Wilderness."

He doesn't watch his old films, however. "They paid me to make the pictures, but not to watch them." He may not have liked all the movies, but enjoyed the money and friends he made while in Hollywood, he says.

"Hollywood was a small town in those days. We would all get together and everyone knew everyone else. Clark Gable was one of my friends. He used to come over and ride with me on Sunday mornings."

Other friends and acquaintances during this

THE MCCOYS, Tim, now 86, and his son, Ron, who co-authored McCoy's autobiography, "Tim McCoy Remembers the West," sit in the den of their Nogales, Ariz., home.

TIM MCCOY, IN BLACK cowboy outfit he pioneered, faces an opponent in Columbia Pictures' "Riding Wild." McCoy, along with dozens of other screen cowboys, was idolized by American youngsters during Hollywood's heyday.

Extremism distorts stand against homosexuals

Dear Dr. Menninger,
I am so disappointed in you. When is anyone going to write about Anita Bryant's "rights," privileges, responsibilities, obligations, etc. She is not homosexual and she IS a parent — a mother, to be exact.

Don't mothers have rights? Giving birth does give you a responsibility of guiding said baby through childhood as YOU determine.

When Anita Bryant had her children, it just wasn't granted that some homosexual has the right to educate her babies. How can being pro-parent be objectionable?

We castigate parents for not being concerned with their children; then when one risks a career to maintain control over who educates, influences, etc. her child, we call her insensitive. Mercy!

People have choices about how to live, but there just is no authority that can force people who choose to live within the major social structure to approve those who choose to live in a way counter or destructive to that society.

Being homosexual does not give you the inherent right to teach my child. I, the parent, retain my responsibility to be selective. I may or may not choose you. This is Miss Bryant's point, and it is VALID. Why can't I find it written?—Mrs. A.M.

Dear Mrs. M.,

In these times, many rights are in conflict. Sometimes the issues are clearly defined; often they are not. In the search for whose rights shall prevail, it often comes down to a difference of opinion between sincere and dedicated people.

It is troubling that in the process, there are those who paint themselves into an extreme position, with an attitude that rules out compromise. Either you're for me or you're against me. And all too often, the extreme position is based more on emotion than on reason.

You ask, "How can being pro-parent be objectionable?" One such instance is when such a position is anti-child. For example, in cases of child abuse, a parent may rightfully defend the severe physical punishment of the child. That parent is absolutely indignant that society, by pursuing a child-abuse complaint, is interfering with his or her right to raise the child.

dr. walt

YOU IMPLY that a teacher with a homosexual orientation is automatically going to undo the efforts of concerned parents. Or that a person's sexual orientation will significantly affect his or her capacity to teach. Those assumptions are myths.

Of course, being homosexual does not give a person the inherent right to teach. Neither does being heterosexual, for teacher selection is presumably based on the capacity for an individual to impart knowledge after having satisfied a state's requirements for teacher certification.

I have no idea of the sexual preference of all the teachers of my children, nor is that a high-priority concern to me. I am far more concerned that teachers be proficient in the knowledge they have to teach, in the skills to impart that knowledge, and the capacity to stimulate my children to learn.

Further, I respect teachers as professionals who keep their private life and personal orientation separate from what they teach. I expect no less from them than any other professional with whom I deal — doctors, lawyers, etc.

Finally, I do not agree that one should automatically assume an individual with a homosexual orientation is destructive to society. I am impressed with the greater destructive potential of a repressive over-reaction to homosexuals reflected by the efforts of Ms. Bryant.

After all, to keep the issue in perspective, the power centers, decision makers and significant leaders in our society — those people who really have the power to affect society — are almost universally heterosexual in their orientation.

(Dr. Menninger invites your comments and questions. Write to him in care of this newspaper. Because of the volume of mail, he cannot answer each individually but will handle questions of general interest in his column.)

Q: I am an admirer of Stephen King, the author of "Carrie," and wondered if he is working on a sequel to that fabulous horror story?

A: King, a stickler for atmosphere, is so determined to give an appropriate chill to his new thriller, that he has moved to a 130-year-old mansion in England, which he chose for its creaking floorboards and gloomy attic. "But I'll move out in a big hurry if the house turns out to be haunted," he says. "I'm afraid of ghosts, and I would not want to stay."

Q: Will Kathryn Crosby return to acting, now that Bing is dead?

go on the road next month in a touring version of "Same Time, Next Year." Now 43, she gave up her career as an actress when she married Bing back in 1957.

Q: My friend insists he thinks better lying down, and I insist he's lazy. Is it possible to be brainier in bed?

A: According to a Colgate University study, it sometimes helps to lie down on the job. Researchers found that undergraduate students stretched out on mattresses with pillows under their feet (but not under their heads) computed math problems 7.4 percent more quickly, and 14 percent more accurately, than they did when sitting at desks.

Q: What's happened to Patty Hearst? Suddenly, after all the publicity, she seems to have dropped out of sight.

A: Following her release from jail on a $1.2 million bond, the elusive Patty remained sequestered in her parents' San Francisco home for nearly a year, but has now started to take quiet trips. Recently, she spent a weekend at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas as the guest of Frank Sinatra.

Completely unrecognized, Patty arrived with a bodyguard, registered with the police department, had dinner with Sinatra and wife Barbara, then returned to San Francisco.

Q: Is it true men lose weight more easily than women, and, if so, why?

A: Weight authorities have found that men definitely slim down quicker and maintain the losses longer than women. Female bodies contain more essential fat and the metabolism rate for men is generally six to seven percent higher than women's, which means they burn up calories faster. Also, because they are usually bigger than women, men use more energy in any given activity.

ADOLF HITLER and his wartime mistress Eva Braun — rumors persist that she gave birth to his child.

Q: I read the recent reports on how a German historian claims to have found a 59-year-old man who was fathered by Adolf Hitler during World War I. But didn't Hitler also have a child by Eva Braun?

A: Unlikely though it seems, several former Nazis claim that Eva did indeed make Der Fuehrer a father during the war. Because Hitler was not prepared to marry her, the birth was kept secret and the infant, a boy, was given to Eva's sister, Grell, who subsequently married an S.S. officer named Hermann Fegelein. Shortly before the collapse of Berlin, so the story goes, Fegelein tried to escape from Germany but was shot on Hitler's orders, presumably to keep the child's identity a secret.

After Hitler's own death, Grell is said to have handed the boy to a wealthy German who subsequently fled to Argentina. If the story is true, Adolf Jr. would now be in his mid-30s, which was Hitler's age when he wrote "Mein Kampf" and began his climb to power as Germany's strong man.

Q: How much did Janet Auchincloss get for her Newport estate, and what is the buyer planning to do with it?

A: Jackie O's mother sold Hammersmith Farm, where John F. Kennedy wooed and won the beautiful Jacqueline, to a Massachusetts attorney for $825,000 — somewhat less than her asking price of $985,000. Plans are to turn the 52-acre waterfront estate into a museum honoring JFK. Among poignant memorabilia that Mrs. Auchincloss left in the 28-room mansion are the desk where the President signed official papers, and the cased twin beds where he and Jackie slept.

JANET AUCHINCLOSS, mother of Jacqueline Onassis, and the home at Hammersmith Farm she recently sold — the house will be turned into a museum.

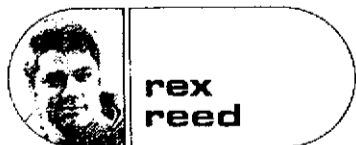

UNRECOGNIZED, Patty Hearst slipped in and out of Las Vegas as a guest of singer Frank Sinatra, above, with wife, Barbara — the heiress is starting to leave the security of her parents' home.

New paths now open to Susan Clark

Everyone knows Susan Clark as Babe Didrikson Zaharias, Amelia Earhart, Hedda Gabler, Lady Macbeth and Colette. But nobody knows Susan Clark. Good reason.

For 10 years, she's been buried under one of those "we'll make you a star" contracts at Universal. It took her a minute to say yes. It took her a decade to claw her way out. Now she's free. "School's out," she says softly. "Now I can do anything I want, or nothing at all." What she's got is what she'd get at the end of 10 years in analysis — herself. But who is she?

The elegant blonde is a horse in mid-stream, and she's got the shapely legs to carry her anywhere she chooses to go. They seem to start at her navel. It is no wonder her professional debut was in "Silk Stockings." But that's getting ahead of the story. She comes from Toronto. Her father was a football player. At the age of 9, she was taking acting lessons. By the age of 12, she was a full-fledged member of the Toronto Children's Theater, where she was guided by Raymond Massey's sister, Dorothy Goulding. At 15, she was apprenticing in summer stock. With money saved, she fled to England at 17, enrolled at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts, lost her North American accent, and debuted on the London stage with Donald Pleasance in "Poor Bites." When her father died of cancer in 1965, Susan returned to Canada, starred in an award-winning production of "Hedda Gabler" on TV, which led to a meeting with talent scouts Eleanor Kilgallen and Monique James, who ran Universal Studio's "talent development" program. Susan headed for Hollywood to become a star. She was 23 years old.

Universal has always had a bunch of girls wasting away under seven-year contracts. They usually wait at the fort in gingham skirts while the male stars fight the Apaches. Some of her leading men were Richard Widmark, Clint Eastwood, Burt Lancaster, Burt Reynolds, Rock Hudson, Gene Hackman and Robert Redford. Except for "Tell Them Willie Boy Is Here," they were all forgettable.

WHEN SUSAN crosses those Cyd Charisse legs and ponders the wasteful 10 years she's just been through, it sounds like a case of too much talent in the wrong sausage factory.

"I was in a stable," she says. "Tall, skinny, with cheekbones, and scared to death. For the first five years, I didn't know what I was doing there."

"I kept notebooks on the characters I played, did homework on character analysis, asked a million questions. I was saying, 'Hey, can I come on your trip, because I'm a little nervous on mine.' I wanted to contribute and share. The directors patted me on the head and said 'That's nice' and none of it ever came off on the screen. Nobody ever said, 'Schmuck, what are you wasting your time for?' An identity crisis developed, I ended up on an analyst's couch."

She was too well trained and over qualified for the shock-schlock Universal wanted to use her for. Her credentials were too good. In 1970, she went on a long suspension for refusing to do any more tacky work. "I became a recluse. I lost my perspective and my sense of humor. I was so-o-o-o naive. I had been a television person. I'd been superbly trained at 17 at the Royal Academy. I'd done 50 plays on the stage before I was 21. It didn't mean ... in California. In fact, I pretended it didn't happen. I tried to hide my own talent and my own intelligence. I thought it would be too embarrassing to let anyone know I had played 'Taming of the Shrew' and 'Mary, Queen of Scotland' on the Universal backlog. In all those years, they never found a way to market me. If they could do it with a can of soup, why couldn't they do it with an attractive, eager young actress?"

SHE HID OUT, married and divorced a writer named Robert Joseph, and the next shot out of the bag was a part in "The Skin Game" playing a "nice hooker-pickpocket named Ginger. The Universal executives said, 'Jeez, we didn't know you could be sexy and funny, too.' Then nothing happened." Next came a western called "Showdown" with Rock Hudson and Dean Martin. "I didn't carry any bandages for the wounded gunfighters in that one, but I fed the chickens back at the ranch while they fought each other." Defeated and depressed, she went off and became the youngest woman ever to play Lady Macbeth in a triumphant production at the Seattle Repertory Co.

Impressed, Universal renegotiated her contract for more money, promising bigger parts. "Every one came out like another very good cake mix. This one's chocolate, that one's lemon. I finally freaked out, stopped fighting the system and said, 'Please let me out of here!' Find someone else who can turn out cake mixes graciously and with excitement! I could not and would not be a television star!"

THEN SHE contradicted herself, because the first thing she did after refusing to appear in a TV series was the TV special "Babe," for which she won a treasured Emmy award. "But that was easy. For the first time, I felt nurtured, protected. All of my opinions, contributions, foibles, eccentricities — everything was used! They said 'Terrific, give us more!' Five hours a day running my ass off at the UCLA track and three hours a day playing golf was easy because my energy finally had a focus. What was difficult for me at Universal was the lack of focus and the feeling of always walking on quicksand."

She won another Emmy nomination for "Amelia Earhart," in which her performance as the lost aviatrix heroine was so impressive it cost Shirley MacLaine and Pete Hamill a whole movie they were preparing on the same subject. Susan Clark was finally getting the applause she had worked for so arduously at Universal.

She obtained her freedom in September. Since then, she has completed a TV production of "Hedda Gabler" and signed for another TV special based on the life of legendary French writer Colette, to be directed by Frank Perry, a man who will know exactly what to do with the talent others have overlooked. She has a new movie for Walt Disney called "The North Avenue Irregulars," in which she plays a law-abiding church lady who forms a league of women crime fighters to confront the Mafia in their New York suburb. Next, she goes into "The Diviners," playing the daughter of a Canadian garbage collector in the Manitoba wilderness who has a child by an Indian savage.

RELEASED from a constricting contract with Universal, Susan Clark is free to play the types of roles she chooses.

NEXT SUMMER, she plans to tour with her "Babe" co-star Alex Karras in a stage production of "Born Yesterday," revealing yet another comic side of her untapped resources. Karras, the former Detroit Lions tackle they nicknamed "Mr. Mean," is also the man in her life. Her father was a football player. Now she's in love with another one. She's come full circle.

"I think I really fell in love with him because he never tested me," she says. "I was raised to believe a real woman should have a rink coat, two kids and a station wagon by the age of 30. I didn't have any of those things when I met Alex. I never heard of him before we met on the 'Babe' set. I had undergone a lot of emotional pain to get free from Universal in order to do that show and I was going into his world — a non-sports person in a movie about sports people."

"I still have muscles from throwing the javelin. It could have been an impossible situation, but Alex was instantly supportive and sympathetic and wonderful. He didn't make me feel insecure because I was intelligent. It's a disadvantage to be intelligent in Hollywood. It's even worse to show it. I never could understand why being attractive and bright was a threat. Men were always saying 'You're too smart!' and I kept thinking, 'Does that mean we can't be friends?' When you're younger, it's necessary to prove you can act, to prove you're a real woman, to prove, prove, prove. Now I don't have to prove anything, I just have to do it."

"I've been wounded by the chaos in my career, but it's all over now. I don't have to worry about images or the way I look. I've learned to trust. Falling in love with Alex Karras coincided with my release from Universal, so I'm not starting all over on my own. I've got a great guy to share my freedom with. Just call me a knowledgeable beginner."

Or late-blooming survivor. Whatever the role, Susan Clark can play it. She learned the hard way, and nothing can stop her now.

The program reduces the student fee from $95 to $3. A participant may take as many or as few courses as he or she desires.

Anyone interested in registering may contact Leonard Kreutner, director of admissions and records, 498-4141. Registration is on Jan. 20. Classes begin Jan. 23.

The Formula

By Edward Nigh
Stark Research Associates

If the holiday schedule is starting to get to you, take a minute out and talk to your plants. Feed them, too.

Regardless of the validity of talking to your greenery, it's certain that a plant, as any other living thing, must have nourishment or it will die. Here's a formula for a good potted plant fertilizer that you can make easily and inexpensively.

The materials required are: one cup POTASSIUM NITRATE, one-third cup SUPERPHOSPHATE, two tablespoons AMMONIUM SULFATE, three tablespoons UREA, one speck CALCIUM CARBONATE, and one-half cup FINE MASON SAND. Dry mix these ingredients together.

(If these chemicals aren't available in your area, a good source of chemicals in Chem-Pak, Tucson, Ariz.)

To use, add one tablespoon to each pot when first set out, and then one tablespoon per month as a side dressing.

Kelly writes, 'I love my grandpa'

My name is Kelly Maria Johnson and I live in Missouri. My grandma sent me a clipping from your newspaper about how you would like for kids to write about their grandparents.

Well, I'm writing about my grandpa, and why I'm lucky to have him for a grandpa. Every summer when school is out my parents and I go to California to visit my grandparents.

Sometimes the other grownups get too busy for me but not my grandpa. He's always ready to listen to me and he shows me lots of card tricks and tells me funny jokes. He let's me walk with him to buy the morning and evening newspapers. Sometimes he let's the neighbor's cats come into the house so I can play with them, even though grandma frowns about that. Grandpa is retired now but once a week he visits the veterans in the hospital, and every Friday he and grandma visit his mother in the nursing home and they bring her doughnuts to eat. She is 92 years old.

I love my grandpa and I'm proud of him. His name is Ivan McDonald but I call him Grandpa Mac. He lives in Long Beach.

Alternative to children

A woman in the neighborhood who has chosen to remain childless announced the other day that she and her husband had found a solution to their empty nest. "Since children are so expensive and make such demands on your time, we've decided to adopt a doll. After all, they do everything a baby does and you don't have all the fuss and responsibility."

We stared at her in disbelief. Is it possible someone could be so naive?

"Look, Kay," I said, "I don't know how to tell you but dolls today are not your dimpled, soft rubber, huggable cuties that you take off all their clothes and sling under the bed. Dolls today move, and demand, and nag and nag and nag. There's Baby Comeback. When you turn her arms down, she walks away, but when the arms start going up she returns to you with arms outstretched and cries. There's Baby Telefoam who yells, "Ma!" until you squeeze her to shut her up. There's Baby Won't-Let-Go that grabs tablecloths, fingers, walls, toys, people... anything, until her batteries go. And do you want to fall over Crater Crunchers and drive over Ultrasonic Scooters in the driveway?

"Baby Alive eats and fills her diapers all day long. Her brother comes with all the parts and you'll have to worry about their playing doctor."

"Wait until you see Tippy Tumbles who stands on her hands to get your attention — and the Mashatron which, when you reach out to strike it, the arms, legs and head fall off."

Kay thought for a moment. "So, I'll get an older child."

"You wanta foot the bill for Cher's wardrobe and her dressing room with an American Indian motif? Or Santan Tuesday who fash but comes with three homes? Or pick up the tab for Barbie's interchangeable heads?"

"How are you going to run a home with a Bionic man and woman running around with their bionic ear, bionic eye and bionic arm? Not to mention the Miconaut Biotron who converts to a tank. Believe me, Kay, you're asking for trouble when you adopt Super Joe Commander. Press his back and he delivers a quick left or right uppercut."

"My husband wants a Farrah Fawcett-Majors doll."

Frankly, I didn't know Kay's marriage was that stable.

Hawaii ready for record year

Blue Hawaii

We flew off the Big Island over a sea drenched with blue ink and instant sun diamonds. No wonder they call this Blue Hawaii.

Some years ago when jet planes came in, Hawaiian and Aloha Airlines had a gloomy discussion. The flying time between islands had been 40 minutes. A classic hospitality of both airlines was a free glass of fresh pineapple juice, passed down the aisles by the brown stewardess in a flowery muumuu.

An airline P.R. told me: "These jets will cut the time between islands to 20 minutes. There won't be time to serve pineapple juice."

They were quite alarmed. As though by some decree, the ukulele, the steel guitar and "Aloha Oe" had been banished from the sugar islands.

Well, let me tell you: "Cool head, main t'ing" — as they say here. It did NOT work out that way. The stewardess takes drink orders before the wheels are off the ground.

BETWEEN Honolulu and Maui — 20 minutes — they serve pre-bottled drinks ($1 a pop) to anybody who wants them. Scoop up the money. Make change. Grab the empty glass from your lips.

"We are now landing at Maui. Mahalo!"

(Maybe you didn't get the free pineapple juice of yesteryear. But aloha deh, brudda! You smashed on one mighty mai-tai.)

"The loveliest fleet of islands that lies anchored in any ocean." I wish I'd said that. But Mark Twain said it first. He was a young freelance correspondent here for the Sacramento Union.

In later famous years, he wrote: "No alien land in all the world has any deep, strong charm for me but that one. For me its balmy airs are always blowing."

We are flying up from Waikoloa on the Big Island. King Kamehameha the Great was born there. He came home there to die. Captain James Cook was killed on this coast. George Vancouver brought the first bull and cows that began the famous Parker Ranch. It now runs 60,000 head of beef cattle.

"THE ANCIENT Lands of Waikoloa" is an attractive booklet of those days. The whalers and sailors. The missionaries and explorers. Write for it: Ernie Beyl, 680

Beach, San Francisco, CA 94109. It's free. (No stamp needed. I just said: "Ernie, that's a VERY good book. Have you got enough to send around?" And he said, "Sure.")

THERE ARE 800,000 people living in Hawaii. Last year there were 3.2 MILLION tourists.

"I don't see any end to it at this point," a hotel man told me. "They're guessing 3.5 million this year. But I'd say closer to four million."

The short run (four hours, forty minutes from the West Coast). Economy package tours: Eight days for $189. (I can't go to Las Vegas for that. Not the way I bet anyway.)

Tourist business is No. 1 in the islands now. Of the 800,000 residents, four of five live in Honolulu. "Kids don't want to work in sugar cane and pineapple," say the kamainas — the native born mix of Hawaiian, Japanese, Chinese, Filipino and whatever.

"All kids want to go Honolulu. See plenty of bright lights. Movies every night. Over here we don't get 'Star Wars' and 'Jaws.'"

In the old plantation towns there's one frame theater. The sign advertising tonight's show is usually in Japanese. An import from the land their fathers came from.

Hawaii has fun for all

By Bob Goligowski
Knight News Service

KAHULA-KONA, Hawaii — In 1888, Mark Twain visited the sun-blessed Kona Coast on the big island of Hawaii and came home impressed.

"At noon one day," he later wrote, "I observed a bevy of nude native young ladies bathing in the sea, and went and sat down on their clothes — to keep them from being stolen."

"I begged them to come out, for the sea was rising, and I was satisfied that they were running some risk."

Probably more from Twain than the sea.

Nowadays, tourists who come to the Kona, or western side, of the island would have to look long and hard to find any natives skinny dipping in the surf.

So they content themselves with fishing for 1,000-pound marlin, sleeping in one of the new, ritzy hotels, exploring century-old mysterious rock carvings in petroglyph fields, snorkeling in the indigo Pacific and soaking up the history of this ancient land.

This was the home of Kamehameha the Great, the legendary reportedly he was seven feet tall king who conquered the Hawaiian Islands and unified them.

THIS IS where British Captain James Cook dropped anchor in 1779 in Kealahou Bay. As every student of Hawaiian history knows, Cook was mistaken for the god Lono who one day was supposed to return to earth.

It soon became apparent to the Hawaiians, after thefts and trade quarrels, that Cook and his men were mere mortals. A fight ensued, and Cook and 17 natives were killed.

There is a white monument marking the spot where Cook fell. But it is one of the relatively few spots on the coast where historical events and sites are marked by signs.

For example, there are thick rock fences running for miles across the land. You have to ask to find out that the fence walls date back 800 years.

The rocks have been fitted together perfectly. No cement or mortar was used. It is said that the natives used the fences to designate property lines.

What may look like a pile of rocks to many tourists is in some cases a former temple and home of ancient gods.

It is often difficult to find the fields of Stone Age rock carving made centuries ago by Hawaiians. They are seldom marked, partly because the island residents fear they will be defaced or vandalized.

Need we say more?

Yes, quite a bit more. But it's necessary to tell you how to take advantage of these incredible bargains. Pan Am's new Pacific Budget Fares.

First of all, you should know that these one-way fares are for confirmed space travel. Of course, it entitles you to the same service as our regular economy fare passengers. (As you can see, at a considerable savings.)

All you have to do is pay for your ticket to the Pacific 3 weeks in advance of the week you want to leave and the week you want to return. (Coming home, you pay the same fare.)

We'll pick the scheduled departure flight and date. At least 7 days before the week you plan on leaving, Pan Am or your travel agent will notify you of your confirmed flight and departure date. Coming back from the Pacific, we'll notify you (or you can call us) one week prior to your planned return to confirm your return date and flight to the U.S.

Of course, with fares this low there are a few conditions. This ticket cannot be refunded in full at any time after purchase. Any cancellation or failure to use this ticket for the specific flight and date assigned by Pan Am will cause 50% of the fare paid to become non-refundable. The non-refundable portion cannot be used as a credit toward the purchase of any other transportation.

If you buy your Budget Fare ticket today, you could be on your way to Pago Pago in three weeks. Starting January 15, you'll be able to fly to all the other places you see here except the South Pacific. And on February 5, we'll add the South Pacific. Making travel available to more places in the Pacific at lower fares than ever before.

Naturally, for these low fares, no stopovers in other cities are permitted and the seats are limited. The fares are subject to government approval. Your travel agent will be glad to help you make the arrangements. And we'll be glad to fly you to the far corners of the world for the lowest fares in history.

PAN AM
America's airline to the world. Nobody can give you more for less.

All fares are subject to government approval.

Reel McCoy remembers old West

period included Ronald Colman, "my best non-Indian friend." Jimmy Stewart, Frederic March, James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Claudette Colbert, Irene Dunne and Loretta Young.

If McCoy's acting career wasn't premeditated, his dream of becoming a cowboy was. It began to take shape during his earliest years.

Born in Saginaw, Mich., in 1891, he left school at 17 and headed West. "When I bought my ticket at the train station, I didn't know where I wanted to go. Once on the train, I met a rancher from Wyoming who suggested I follow him to the end of the line. It seemed like a good idea, so I did."

"I worked as a cowboy until World War I. Teddy Roosevelt was looking for Rough Riders to send behind the German lines, so I wrote him a telegram and said I thought I could recruit all the cowboys he needed from Wyoming and Montana. He sent back a one word reply: 'Bully.'"

Roosevelt's plan was abandoned, however, when President Woodrow Wilson rejected the proposal. McCoy then joined the army as a cavalry officer.

After the war he was appointed adjutant general of Wyoming, at the age of 28, and settled down on a large ranch in the state.

MOTION PICTURES beckoned in 1922

A long-time devotee of Indian lore and friend to several tribes, McCoy had learned sign language. When Jesse Lasky began filming "The Covered Wagon," he needed someone who could function as a liaison between the Indian extras and the film crew.

McCoy was approached by one of Lasky's representatives.

He subsequently was asked to advise on other films and, from there, began his career as an actor. McCoy's acting career flourished until World War II when, although over age, he enlisted in the army.

"After World War II the Western was never really the same again," he said. "We depended on the small neighborhood theaters for our success — on the kids who would come every Saturday and watch our pictures. We had a lot of influence on those kids. I think it was good for us. We became better people, so we could live up to their expectations."

"I've had grown men come up to me and say, 'I watched you every Saturday afternoon as a child.' One young man came up to me in Washington, D.C., during World War II and said, 'Do you know what I did for you when I was young?' 'No,' I said, thinking he had served under me. 'Well, every Saturday afternoon, I went to the movies. When the bad guys would make an appearance, I would shoot staples at them.'"

"The kids today don't have any heroes and there are very few neighborhood theaters left."

AFTER ENDING his film career and a brief television career, McCoy toured the country as a performer in several circuses. During the summers, his wife, Inga, and two young sons traveled along.

After Inga's death three years ago, McCoy retired from the circus. Inga McCoy, like her husband, had an eventful life and McCoy loves to talk about the woman he describes proudly as "the most beautiful woman I ever knew, without an ounce of vanity."

"She was born in Denmark of wealthy parents and spent her younger years as a socialite, traveling the European continent. At one party she attended during a European tour, she overheard some people speculating whether Hitler's deputy, Hermann Goring, and German actress Emmy Sonneman were planning to marry."

"Inga went home, looked up Sonneman's name in the phone book and called her for confirmation of the rumor," he said. "After getting an exclusive interview, she sold the story to a Danish newspaper."

"Several weeks later, Inga received a telegram, inviting her to the wedding as 'Emmy Sonneman's personal guest.' Adolph Hitler, best man at the wedding, was so impressed by Inga's beauty he offered her an exclusive interview."

Before leaving Germany for the United States in the late 1930s, Inga had obtained two exclusive interviews with Hitler and some impressive credentials. During her years in America, prior to her marriage to McCoy, she worked as fashion editor for Harper's Bazaar and as a newspaper columnist.

Today, McCoy lives with his son, Ron, and daughter-in-law, in Nogales, Ariz., in a Spanish hacienda. "I built the house myself," McCoy said, "using materials I had brought up from Mexico. I built it big enough so that my children can live here with me."

"The house is strong. It should last 300 years and will be passed down through the generations of my family."

He maintains his youthful appearance and outlook, he said, by "spending a lot of time outdoors, keeping busy and drinking scotch and soda." The wisdom of his Indian friends and their philosophy has also helped him understand much about himself and the essence of life.

"Indians don't question or complain — they just accept everything as part of the Great Plan. That's their nature and their training. They accept everything life has to offer — love, death, grief, friendship. That's the only way to live."

Medicine and You

Weakness from laughter sign of illness

Adolescents who suffer daytime sleepiness should be asked if they get weak when they laugh.

If they say yes, it may suggest they are suffering from a disorder known as narcolepsy. This is a chronic ailment characterized by recurrent attacks of drowsiness and sleep.

Many of these victims suffer cataplexy, a sudden loss of muscle tone.

According to Dr. Elliot D. Weitzman, chairman of neurology at Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York City, weakness while laughing is a sign of cataplexy.

It can involve paralysis of all body muscles. The patient literally falls down laughing. Or there may be paralysis of certain muscles, such as the facial muscles.

Symptoms misread

Hay fever is often mistaken for colds in older infants and children, a doctor says.

The condition, also called allergic rhinitis (nasal inflammation), frequently is the problem when the "cold just won't go away," according to Dr. Wallace H. Dunlap of Tulane University School of Medicine in New Orleans, La.

What points to allergic rhinitis are persistence of nasal discharge, a clear nasal discharge, continual sneezing and a family history of such symptoms.

A food elimination diet can help to diagnose and eliminate the problem, the doctor says.

Affects birth weight

A low gynecologic age (GA) increases the risk of delivery of a low birth weight infant.

Gynecologic age? It's chronological age minus age at menarche — onset of menstrual function.

New look at L.B. job effort

CETA workers are 58 percent male, according to statistics furnished by Chapman. About 70 percent fall between 22 and 45 years of age, with the remaining 30 percent evenly split above and below that age group.

Racially, they are approximately 45 percent Caucasian, 35 percent black, 12 percent Spanish-surnamed and the remaining 8 percent other races such as American Indian or Asian.

A MAJOR CETA goal is to place participants in permanent jobs. As of the end of October, the placement figures were about equal in proportion to the percentages in sex and age, but were off on race.

About 60 percent of those getting jobs were Caucasian, 20 percent black, 15 percent Spanish-surnamed and 5 percent other.

Two agencies handle the placing of CETA applicants with the city and community groups: the local office of the state Employment Development Department and the privately owned Long Beach College of Business.

Long Beach City College and the College of Business handle the training of unskilled workers and remedial education, if any is needed. The Bryman Schools, Truckmasters and other private institutions also provide training.

Costs for training at the private agencies run the CETA program $1,800-$2,000 per student, according to Chapman. Long Beach City College can train for about $1,350 per student.

L.B. bus lines may be ended

Two community bus lines that have been losing money since their inception in 1976 may be discontinued soon.

The board of directors of the Long Beach Public Transportation Co. has recommended the discontinuance of Routes 1776 in Belmont Shore and 1976 in North Long Beach, and the city's Bureau of Franchises will consider the recommendation at its meeting in the City Council chambers at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday.

In addition, the bureau will take up a number of bus route changes, including a change in Route 8, part of which runs along 10th Street.

With the recommended changes, the route would serve the Convention Center and the Civic Center, as well as the Queen Mary and the Hilton Hotel.

The route would also be stretched along its eastern segment to Colorado Lagoon, Bayshore Beach and the Belmont Shore shopping district.

A rainy protest

Pickets at Long Beach Veterans Memorial Building, Cedar Avenue and Broadway, endure showers Saturday as they protest planned demolition of the building, which is to be replaced by a $13 million state office building next year. Razing of the 40-year-old downtown landmark is opposed by a half-dozen veterans organizations, Gold Star Mothers and Beach Area Concerned Citizens.

Operation Christmas Share Yule with needy family of 6

Helen Guthrie Smith
Staff Writer

"I've had a long string of that bad luck, and I pray it's gone at last," is a line sung by Paul Simon and Phoebe Snow.

Mr. and Mrs. W. could very well have been singing that same tune, for they certainly have had some hard times. But unlike the supplication by Paul and Phoebe, their prayers aren't likely to be answered anytime soon. Their string of bad luck started about three years ago when Mr. W. was injured in an auto accident and had to have one leg amputated.

Because of the trauma of the amputation, Mr. W. couldn't go back to his job. He may never be able to go back to work.

Mrs. M. was working, trying to keep the family of six together, but misfortune struck again — she got laid off.

Recently, adding to the family's woes, their car was totaled in another accident.

Now, because of an overpayment of disability benefits, the family is existing on welfare checks only.

They have no car, no jobs, and they are in danger of losing their home.

A good Christmas dinner would be a morale boost to Mr. and Mrs. W. and their children, Tim, 17, who is handicapped and must attend a special school, Judy, 15, David, 7, and John, 4.

WITH YOUR help, Operation Christmas will see that the family gets such a dinner, and will see that the two younger children each get a toy.

Operation Christmas would like to give Christmas dinners to lots of other needy Long Beach families and individuals and give toys to hundreds of youngsters under age 12. It can do so only with your help.

The charity has collected $5,564.50 so far, but has a long way to go — with very little time — to reach its goal of $15,000.

If you can help, send your donations to I.P.T. Operation Christmas, P.O. Box 420, Long Beach, Calif. 90801. All contributions are tax deductible.

Donations of food or new toys may be taken to the Operation Christmas Clearing House at 455 E. Spring St.

Used clothing or used toys can be donated to neighborhood centers or the Salvation Army at 1370 Alamitos Ave.

As in previous years, Operation Christmas is sponsored by the Independent, Press-Telegram and administered by the Salvation Army in cooperation with the Department of Public Social Services, the Parent-Teacher Association, Catholic Social Services, the city's neighborhood and facility centers, Senior Opportunities Services and the Community Improvement League.

THOMAS CLARK

Mayor Clark to seek fifth term on City Council

Long Beach Mayor Thomas Clark — the City Council's senior member — announced Saturday he will seek re-election to a fifth term from the Fourth District.

"Long Beach has made great strides in the past few years to improve its governmental structure," Clark said.

Clark, an optometrist, has served as a councilman since 1965 and was elected mayor by his colleagues in 1975.

"A city is like a living organism in that it is always undergoing change," Clark said. "The form that change takes must conform to the new needs of the community."

"Also, change must be made in a logical and sensible fashion and not simply for the sake of change. I hope to be able to continue to bring about necessary improvements in our city government," he said.

Clark is first vice president of the Los Angeles County Division of the League of California Cities and serves on the league's state board.

He is also a member of committees of the U.S. Conference of Mayors and the National League of Cities. Clark has served as past president and member of the Independent Cities of Los Angeles County.

Before his election to the council, Clark was president of the Park Commission and active in numerous community organizations.

Power-boat noise testing set

The National Drag Boat Association will conduct muffler and header noise tests on power boats at Long Beach Marine Stadium from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday.

The session — during which the stadium will be closed to the public — is part of a drive to reduce noise associated with power-boat events at the facility.

The Long Beach Recreation Commission has imposed an 85-decibel noise limit on all events to be held there beginning Jan. 1.

Operation Christmas error

Used clothing or used toys to be donated to the Operation Christmas charity program can be taken to the Salvation Army at 1370 Alamitos Ave., Long Beach. An incorrect address was published last week in Saturday's Independent, Press-Telegram.

Sears CORRECTION NOTICE

In Sears' Advertisement effective through Dec. 24 an inadvertent error occurred. The Saving on the Frostless Refrigerator #67161 should have read — Save $60. The price of the refrigerator should have read $599.95. We regret the error and any inconvenience it may have caused.

What Is A Catalog Surplus Store?
Many people have the feeling that it is an assortment of odds-and-ends, one of a kind items and customer returns. While this is true, it amounts to a very small portion of the merchandise available to you, our customers. Most of the goods are brand new, first quality merchandise in which we have bought more than we can sell during the life of our general catalog or similar sale catalogs. We must liquidate it as surplus — and this we do at reduced selling prices through our Catalog Surplus Stores. Our loss is your gain — Make shopping a habit at Sears Catalog Surplus Stores and save on clothing, household items and appliances for you and your family.

Legal-data workshops set for public agency workers

A series of 15 workshops sponsored by the Long Beach Legal Aid Foundation to provide legal information for directors of community agencies and neighborhood centers begins Monday.

Law Action Network (PLAN), a program involving training workshops for groups that work directly with persons who have legal problems. Later, the unit will hold legal information workshops for the general public in parks, schools and "wherever people gather," said PLAN spokeswoman Denise M. DiPasquale.

Search yields no bodies

HESPERIA (AP) — A small private plane which crashed into a hillside early Saturday and burst into flames apparently had been replaced with extra fuel tanks, authorities said.

But little else was known about the badly burned Piper Cherokee six-seater aircraft — especially the whereabouts of the pilot.

Deputies searched the area of the gutted wreckage on foot during the night and a helicopter surveyed the surrounding hillsides, but neither search yielded any signs of life or bodies.

December 31, 1977

In Mexico, as the new year begins, we pay homage to the source of light. Wear a golden sun, we say, to bring the springtime early.

We have another tradition, too — a thousand-year-old Aztec heritage of working the precious gold and silver of our land into fine jewelry.

Now, the craftsmen of Franklin Mint de Mexico have married these traditions to create 'The Pendant of the Aztec Sun' — fashioned of pure 24 karat gold electroplated on solid sterling silver. Gold and silver from the great mines of Mexico — so treasured by the Aztecs and sought by the Conquistadors.

The design of the pendant is inspired by the Aztec Calendar Stone — the famous Sun Stone. But the design is new. It blends together the fascinating images of our Aztec heritage. At the very center is the sign of Tonatiuh, the sun god. Surrounding him are myriad tiny symbols of ancient Aztec lore. The result is intriguing and very beautiful — a fine tracery of perfectly detailed relief raised from a background of gold, polished bright as the sun itself.

Franklin Mint de Mexico will strike 'The Pendant of the Aztec Sun' in limited edition, and solely for those who reserve it by year's end, December 31. It will not be available for original purchase in stores anywhere. Orders from the United States will be received and fulfilled for us by our affiliate, The Franklin Mint. The price, including a 12 karat gold-filled chain and gift case, is $40.

A certificate attesting to the limits of the issue, and the fact that the pendant has been crafted in Mexico, of Mexican gold and silver, will accompany each pendant.

Here in Mexico, we believe the springtime will come early and always, to those who wear the golden symbol of the sun. As the new year begins, no gift is more perfect — for yourself or for a loved one.

Price is Wilde when it comes to good talk

By John J. Mullins
Associated Press

BOSTON — If the champagne sparkles but the conversation doesn't, put some of the blame on the lack of personal contact in today's world, says actor Vincent Price.

Price portrays one of history's wittiest conversationalists — Oscar Wilde — in the one-man show, "Divisions & Delights," at the Colonial Theater.

"His use of the language is incredible," Price said of the Irish playwright, author and lecturer. "How few people can carry on a conversation today."

"You listen to an interviewer today; they don't use the language."

"There's not any interest in the language today, except by writers," he said. "People don't talk, do they?"

In the late 19th century of Oscar Wilde, "there was person-to-person contact," something lacking now, Price said in an interview.

Price, who has appeared in hundreds of films and television shows, portrays Wilde "because he's the funniest man in the world."

"Everybody is a Wilde fan. Every great comic line somehow stems from Oscar Wilde. . . . He sat down and wrote the two greatest comedies in the English language," Price said, referring to "Lady Windemere's Fan" and

"The Importance of Being Earnest."

John Gay, who wrote the show in which Price stars, spent four years putting it together, Price said. "Joe Hardy (the director) sent it to me, and I loved it."

Price, Gay and Hardy cut the script, and Price added one line. The show includes stories attributed to Wilde by other writers, but "none of it is fictionalized except (Wilde's) actually giving a benefit at the end of his life," Price said.

"He told a story so well that people actually remembered them, convinced they were exactly as he told them," the actor said of Wilde.

It's Price's first one-man show, "but I've been a lecturer for 20 years, and this is a lecture (the show's situation), and Wilde was a lecturer, so it all works."

Author, actor, art collector, lecturer, columnist — the 66-year-old Price is known for his work in horror films, but says, "I think, in a funny way, I'm as well known to a certain public for poetry" through his many recordings.

Of the horror films, he says most of his were based on the writings of Poe, Hawthorne and De Maupassant.

"They're movies that use everything movies are famous for" — special effects, costumes, sets. "Nowadays, they're trying to photograph real life."

"People don't talk"

"It's an awful challenge to me to do them. To make the unbelievable believable is much more difficult than making the believable unbelievable," he said.

"I'm furious I wasn't in 'Star Wars.'"

Anaheim slates student musical

The ninth annual "Holiday in Music," a traditional extravaganza staged by music students of the Anaheim Union High School District, will be held the evenings of Dec. 14 and 15.

The events will be in Anaheim Convention Center's arena, the 9,000-seat facility which is the only one in the county capable of housing 3,000 singers, dancers and instrumentalists from 26 junior and senior high schools in the Anaheim system.

YOUR HOROSCOPE
by JEANE DIXON
Forecast for Monday

YOUR BIRTHDAY TO-DAY: Take special care of family unit, even pet! Engage in active sports. Expect promotion or raise early 1978. Watch cash reserves carefully. Plan long vacation in midsummer. Look for new friendships with Libras, Leos, Aries and Aquarians! Towards fall and winter, you may make important change in personal and professional life. Rely on your own intellect or reason.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Flexibility, patience are all important. Be less skeptical, more positive, particularly with members of opposite sex! Omit alcoholic beverages.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be less pig-headed! Avoid tantrums. Work tirelessly without being boring. Do favor for needy person. Show less ambition and you will get further up the ladder.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Creative projects are favorite. You could hit the jackpot! Do not procrastinate. New business ventures questionable. Reserve cash savings carefully. Show more zeal at the office. Old friends may not be good for you now.

CANCER (June 21-July 20): Don't day dream. Set chores and priorities. Forget the past. Relatives and in-laws figure strongly. Be less stubborn. Confide little.

LEO (July 21-Aug. 22): Use power more judiciously. Play according to the rules. Be more up front in business and personal dealings. Pay more attention to details. Curb emotional outbursts, forget past hurts. Co-workers need leadership. Don't take sides. Meditate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't let perfectionist nature impede progress. Invest wisely but seek expert advice. A change of job to something that requires analysis and detail could mean a good promotion or raise. Play hunches, but not the stock market. Capricorn may cut a wide swath in your life. Look him or her over carefully before you give the green light to the relationship.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Avoid self-indulgence. Turn attention to practical affairs, even balancing the family budget. Stick to original plans. Delay travel. Take care in business transactions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Increase work productivity. Bosses should be impressed. Keep secrets. Curb jealousy. Sports or reading excellent outlets for competitiveness. Be less demanding of mate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't underestimate cunning of others! Secret affairs could be disastrous. Choose friends carefully. Program leisure as diligently as you program your work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't let ambitions get ahead of energies. Spend more time with family, less on career. Curb sharp tongue. Practice patience. Let fun-loving nature dominate serious side. Conserve health.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Get more balance with fun and games as well as beloved work. Be less gregarious, more thoughtful. Meditation is helpful instead of so much "group" thinking.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Flexibility and forgiveness are in order. Make new friendships and see less of old connections. Living in the past is not for you. Business ventures sound but read small print carefully. Consult legal experts before entering into binding contracts.

Jackie not afraid of mere men

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press

PARIS — "I'm no longer afraid of men," says Jacqueline Bisset, who displays a new maturity along with her emergence as an important film star.

She is working here in "Someone Is Killing the Great Chefs of Europe," and everyone involved, including co-star George Segal, concedes that hers is the biggest role.

Miss Bisset plays a premiere dessert chef who becomes involved in a demoniacal scheme to wipe out the leading practitioners of haute cuisine. Segal plays her ex-husband, a fast-food franchiser who couldn't care less about crepes suzettes.

"Jackie has to carry the picture," says William Aldrich, who is producing "Chefs" for Lorimar-Almich-Bavaria Films. "I'm sure George accepted his role out of faith in Ted Kotcheff, who directed him in 'Fun With Dick and Jane.' George has been a big help to Jackie with the comedy, which is new to her."

"CHEFS" is the third big film in a row for Miss Bisset. "The Deep" was a box-office winner that enhanced her salability with producers. She recently completed "The Greek Tycoon" in a role transparently patterned after another Jacqueline.

In Paris, Kotcheff has been filming in the kitchens of the city's famed cafes, starting before dawn so as not to interfere with the regular cooking. One morning Jackie was working in the subterranean kitchen of the Lido, which had been converted to resemble Buckingham Palace. Afterward she talked about her career and her changed attitude.

"The nice thing about having some success is that you are able to contribute," she remarked. "I can make suggestions about a scene and people will listen, which is the way it should be in a collaborative art. Earlier in my career I worked with directors who didn't want any suggestions, especially from women."

"I must admit that men used to frighten me. I suppose that goes back to my upbringing in England. My father was the voice of authority, and little girls were supposed to look pretty and not ask questions. I don't mean to put down my father, because I adore him. But that's just the way it was in England."

HER FEAR of men carried over to her career, since the film industry, except for its use of actresses and women in a few crafts, is male-oriented. Directors treated her "like a blind puppet," and she was too scared to object.

"The Deep" helped change her attitude.

"It was an untellable experience," Jackie said. "It taught me things about myself that I never realized before. Before, I was timorous and unquestioning. No more."

Her last roles have taken Jackie to the Bahamas, Greece and now to Venice, Paris, London and Munich for "Chefs."

WHY a career at REX L. HODGES REALTY COMPANY

BERNIE JONES
Vice-President, Gen. Sales Mgr.

WHY A CAREER AT REX L. HODGES REALTY?

Answer: You have more going for you. "IT IS JUST THAT SIMPLE," stated Bernie Jones, Vice-President/General Sales Manager. Rex L. Hodges Realty has been in business since 1929. That's over 48 years in the Long Beach/Orange County basin. We are a "Family of Companies." Today more than ever before we all value a family relationship. Our family extends from Robert C. Westmyer, owner of Rex L. Hodges Realty, to one of our newer salespersons Steve Smith, who recently joined Rex L. Hodges at our Westminster Village office. Steve formerly owned a large hamburger franchise. Everyday we are striving to make "Our Company" a better Company.

The Real Estate market is pretty well saturated in every city, so there has to be reason to choose REX L. HODGES REALTY and after 48 years in this business we know what the differences are: We also feel the programs we offer to salespersons, and also to the customers, who will be selling their homes, and the persons who will purchase homes in 1977 will enable you, the salesman, to provide 100% coverage. When Rex L. Hodges Realty offers the services, we are aware we have that extra edge coupled with 48 years of sound, confident service. A solid family atmosphere and you have a winner.

JUST LOOK AT THE DIFFERENCES

Growth: We recently opened our new Seal Beach office on Pacific Coast Highway. Juanita Newman, the manager, is a fine example of the great opportunity at Rex L. Hodges company.

If management is in your plans, plan a career with Rex L. Hodges Realty.

In 1976 Rex L. Hodges Realty purchased Pacific Bay Real Estate in Northern California serving the East Bay area including Oakland, Berkeley and Richmond. Now! That's growth, and we are negotiating with others at this very time.

Equity Loans! Your customers can take advantage of a "no payment" part of their equity loan and repay when their home has sold.

Training and Counseling: A professional never stops training and retraining. A license allows you to sell. Rex L. Hodges Realty shows you how to match the right buyer and the right home, and how to market that owner's home to get it sold. Real Estate is a very rewarding profession and yet there are many different problems that arise, and when a Company has fellows like Earl J. Christensen, Vice-President, and Terry Mulholland, Vice-President, you have two of the finest minds in General Real Estate in the State of California. When you join Rex L. Hodges you join our family and families seem to have a way of overcoming any or all of the difficulties that arise.

Trade in Program: An absolute must in the 70's. Our Trade-In Program is not some hit or miss proposition. It works. We pioneered "Trade-Ins" in 1929. Think about it.

H & H Development Co. H & H Development Co. is a subsidiary of Rex L. Hodges, a part of our family. We build apartments, condominiums, shopping centers and medical offices. We will also build for your clients on their buildable lots. All H & H properties are covered by a Builder's One Year Warranty. Another good reason to start your career at Rex L. Hodges.

HOME WARRANTIES: LIMITED WARRANTY

When you purchase your next home specify you want an American Home Shield Warranty. (*This one year warranty protects your home against the defects or malfunction of the major systems, appliances, and hot water heater, garbage disposal, dishwasher and last but not least waste and drainline stoppages). So call the nearest Rex L. Hodges office and specify that you want an American Home Shield One Year Warranty and leave the shopping to us.

When you sell your home please remember that when your home is listed with Rex L. Hodges Realty, if you so desire, your home will be covered by American Home Shield Warranty. Ask the salesperson about the details. Better still call and we will deliver the brochures with information. Well, we ran out of space, but I hope that maybe we have told the Rex L. Hodges story and remember there is a difference when you join our family.

Cordially yours,
Bernie Jones

Bernie Jones

Yule special

*Raymond Burr will narrate
'Christmas Around the World'*

By Bob Martin
TV-Radio Editor

Raymond Burr must have thought I had traveled to his home by wheelchair. Even Perry Mason couldn't have gotten me an acquittal on a late-for-an-interview charge.

I was guilty, all right, and that's all there was to it. But it wasn't that I had been late in leaving Long Beach; it was simply that I had taken a few wrong turns on the narrow, winding roads in the Hollywood hills and had gotten lost temporarily.

When I finally did reach Burr's hill-side home, I was a bit apprehensive that I'd find him in an ugly mood. After all, he's a busy man. But he greeted me with a warm welcome, and couldn't have been more understanding, more forgiving or more genial.

Indeed, he could have passed for the jolliest of Santas, if only he'd had on a red suit.

Burr possesses the perfect figure to play Santa Claus. I thought, as I started questioning him about his upcoming special, "Christmas Around the World." Not that he does portray the ho-ho-ho man, however.

No, he won't play Santa, but he will be the narrator for the special, an international production that will bring Christmas celebrations from seven countries to viewers around the world.

In this country, "Christmas Around the World" will air on Public Broadcasting Service stations. It will be seen from 10 to 11 p.m. Saturday — Christmas Eve — on KCET (Channel 28).

Burr had planned to spend Christmas on Naitauba, the 3,500-acre island in the Fijis which he has owned for 12 years. But instead he'll be in New York City, at TV station WNET, on Christmas Eve to do the special, which will air live in many places (though not on Channel 28).

Why was he willing to change his plans? The wealthy actor, whose "Perry Mason" and "Ironside" television series still air in reruns all over the world, cited his deep interest in religion and love for children.

Burr expects one of the largest TV audiences ever — hundreds of millions viewers around the world — to view the special as celebrations are telecast from Israel, New Zealand, Britain, Germany, France, Jamaica and the United States.

The production will be a triumph of collaboration among four television networks — the British Broadcasting Corp., which will mastermind the operation from London; FR3 of France; ZDF of Germany, and, in the United States, South Carolina Educational Television. Production costs of the U.S. part of the show have been underwritten by a grant from the Sun Co.

Six man-made communications satellites hovering high above the earth in a globe-girdling television network will make it possible to transmit the celebrations in the seven countries live to more than 20 nations around the world.

Viewers will be transported from darkest night to brightest day, from the snow-clad mountains of Bavaria in southern Germany to the warmth and color of the Caribbean in Kingston, Jamaica. It will be summer in New Zealand where a group of Maoris will sing a carol in their native tongue amid sunshine and flowers.

Christmas music will be featured. In Columbia, S.C., a choir from the University of South Carolina will sing carols in a modern shopping center. In London's Westminster Abbey, 22 boy singers who study at the abbey's choir school will perform. At the fairy-tale castle of Azay-le-Rideau on France's Loire River, singers and musicians in 16th century costumes will perform 16th century Christmas music. The Tolz Boys' Choir in the Bavarian village of Bichl will sing carols. And St. John's Armenian Choir will perform traditional Armenian Christmas chants in St. James' Square in Jerusalem.

The opening and closing segments will originate in Bethlehem. The program will open there at midnight (Bethlehem time) in the Church of the Nativity, which traditionally marks the spot where Jesus was born, and it ends there. Outside, in Manger Square, a host of pilgrims will sing "Adeste Fideles" ("O' Come, All Ye Faithful").

Raymond Burr is happy he'll be taking part in "Christmas Around the World." It's his way of saying "Merry Christmas" to his many fans.

WHEN RAYMOND BURR narrates "Christmas Around the World" on Dec. 24, he'll rely on a network of satellites like this Intelsat IV-A to beam the show from seven countries to viewers in more than 20 nations. Jamaican entertainers (below) will be among the holiday season revelers. The special will air at 10 p.m. Saturday on Channel 28.

Valerie Mahaffey plays daughter in 'Tell Me My Name'

Actress makes name for herself

By Kay Gardella
New York News Service

NEW YORK — Fairy tales do come true if you're 23, beautiful, with long flowing brown hair, trim figure and can dance, sing and act. For proof tune in the GE Theater drama "Tell Me My Name" Tuesday night on CBS and catch Valerie Mahaffey in the role of an illegitimate girl. (It's on Channel 2 at 9:30.)

This modern-day Cinderella looks like she stepped from the pages of Grimm's Fairy Tales. Her pretty face brightens up the TV screen, as the 90-minute drama unfolds, and the first thought that passes a critic's mind is this young lady is headed for stardom. Aside from having a face that you remember, she can act, too. It helps.

But how do young girls get so much so soon? For answers, we tracked down Valerie and found her to be shy and reluctant about giving out interviews. Why?

In her very cultured boarding-school voice, she said softly: "I heard David Susskind say one night on his talk show that actors were the dumbest people in the public eye. That people with something to say should be interviewed."

Susskind, of course, doesn't look like Valerie. As for identifying with the "dumb" performers, he's alluding to, she need not. The young Indonesian-born actress is well traveled, has attended school in London and Texas, and has her degree from the University of Texas.

Coincidentally, her costar Barbara Barrie, who plays her mother in the GE Theater drama, is a graduate of the same school.

"My father, a Texan, was in the oil business so we traveled a lot. That's how I came to be born in Indonesia. I have a brother eight years younger named after my father, Lewis, who is in boarding school in England. I regret not being around to see him growing up into an adult."

Valerie currently is living on the West Side of Manhattan. She's sharing an apartment with an actor-friend, also from the University of Texas, but it's strictly platonic, she insists. "I'm very old-fashioned," protested Valerie. "Besides, I have a boyfriend in Oklahoma, who I've been going with since high school, and I wouldn't want him to get the wrong impression."

The young actress, who appeared in "Bus Stop" on television a year ago, feels socially handicapped because she can't get in step with today's free-wheeling moral standards. She credits her mother with ingraining her obvious lady-like quality in her — and the fact that she attended boarding school in England.

"I was very outgoing before I went there. A boarding school can really wreck your self confidence and the ability to deal with social situations."

The boarding school was in the seaside retirement town of Devonshire. It was then called West Bank but has since been turned into a hotel.

"I was very shy," recalls Valerie. "They had a detention system where you got punished for everything from talking to boys (it was an all girls school) to going out in the rain without boots. We even had to walk up the back stairs; we weren't allowed in the front entrance."

One thing Valerie learned, she said, and that was to study. "We took 14 subjects a semester and all our exams were written. When I transferred to American schools everything was true or false."

RICH PEOPLE BUY NEW HOUSES SMART PEOPLE ... REMODEL THEIR OLD ONES

When you buy new, you're paying an inflated price for a structure of unproven quality. But when you remodel, you're simply making something that you already know is good ... better!

We at Alamo have been making Southland houses better for over 9 years. People depend on our remodeling services for several simple, but important, reasons:

SAFETY ... every job is individually bonded. Protects you from labor or material liens and assures your job will be completed.

SERVICES ... our creative designing ability is confirmed when you visit any of our beautiful showrooms. Of course, we give free estimates and home consultation.

EXPERIENCE ... Alamo builds more jobs than 99% of the remodeling contractors in the United States. No business can do this unless they are selling a quality product at a fair price.

British TV goes beyond entertainment

By Bryan Silcock
London Sunday Times Reporter

LONDON — British television, which has been widely acclaimed for its excellent programs, is currently reaching beyond the field of entertainment to provide its audience with a new system for communicating practical information.

Under the system, which recently went into operation, viewers can ask their television sets for a printed magazine that features everything from the latest news and weather reports to stock market quotations, currency exchange rates, travel advice, gastronomic recipes and, of course, an index to the range of data available.

bles a pocket calculator. These gadgets are being sold for attachment to television sets.

The appearance of these devices amounts to a vote of confidence by the television industry in an experiment undertaken three years ago by the British Broadcasting Corp., which functions under public charter, and a year later by the Independent Television Authority, which runs Britain's commercial television channels.

During the experimental stage, both outfits broadcast so-called "teletext magazines," consisting of printed information on a variety of subjects. These broadcasts were impressive enough for television manufacturers to start producing sets able to carry them.

The teletext magazines are not allotted separate channels, but ride on regular transmissions. The special decoding device attached to the set is needed to disentangle the teletext signals and display them on demand.

The device is selling at present for the equivalent of several hundred dollars, which is certainly more than most people will pay. The expectation is, however, that the price will drop dramatically when the equipment is produced and marketed on a large scale.

The industry is confident that it now has about 50,000 customers, mainly among people who are attracted to electronic innovations. With lower costs, its spokesmen say, there is a mass market.

One of the chief limitations of a teletext magazine is that it cannot realistically broadcast more than 100 pages. This is because the pages must be transmitted in sequence, and the maximum speed of transmission is

'Holocaust' film

Shooting under way in Europe

By Stephen H. Miller
BERLIN (AP)—Off-duty American soldiers played Nazi SS men and workers from Turkey were Polish Jews in a television saga filmed here despite problems with politics and potatoes.

West Berlin, with the help of East Germany, starred as the Warsaw Ghetto. "The Berliners don't like to hear this, but it turns out that because of its special problems Berlin is the only European city today that actually looks like the Warsaw of those years," said Pia Arnold, an associate producer for Titus Productions Inc. of New York.

One scene, of Jews being shipped to a concentration camp, was filmed next to the Berlin Wall at an unused railroad station. Like all rail facilities, it's owned and run by East Germany.

"They have been very cooperative," said Arnold of the East Germans.

ACTORS REPRESENTING a convoy of Jewish deportees arrive at simulated Warsaw Ghetto station, in this scene filmed in West Berlin for NBC's four-part "Holocaust" drama, which is due to air next spring. Fritz Weaver and Rosemary Harris, two of the principals, are just behind the two youngsters at the left. The film dramatizes Nazi atrocities against six million Jews in World War II.

"They have been about the easiest of all to deal with. They are interested in having this story told."

The story, of three Jewish families during the Nazi persecution, was shot by Titus as a nine-hour saga titled "Holocaust," which NBC hopes to air in the United States over four nights next spring.

The station scene was filmed with occasional cries for quiet aimed at a little building nearby where potatoes were being dumped out of bags for sale in West Berlin.

The station is one of several isolated or obscure areas of West Berlin where politics has left standing buildings and grounds from an earlier era. Not far away are the battered tenements of the working class Wedding district, where the movie company is shooting a scene set in the Nazi-organized Jewish ghetto of Warsaw.

To move the shooting from Austria, where the rest of the film was made, producers had to negotiate their way through the legal and bureaucratic tangle that has grown up over the years in a city whose affairs involve two German governments, a city government and the civilian and military governments of the three Western Allies who still theoretically occupy West Berlin.

Strict controls on weapons movements made it difficult to bring in the rifles carried by soldiers in the movie. The soldiers posed other problems.

"We've found that real soldiers make the best soldiers," says Arnold.

But no West German troops are allowed in West Berlin and neither West German nor Allied commanders were eager to see their men in Nazi uniforms. The solution was to give the roles to U.S. soldiers stationed in West Berlin but on leave or otherwise off duty.

SPECIAL

MIME DREAMING OF A WHITE CHRISTMAS (28), 12 Noon & (50, 8 p.m. — The Great American Mime Experiment of Cleveland presents this unique look at the happenings of the holiday season, expressed in pantomime.

HENRY WINKLER MEETS WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE (2), 5 p.m. — This special undertakes to familiarize a young audience with some of the Bard's best-known works along with an understanding of how plays were produced at the Globe Theatre.

FAT ALBERT'S CHRISTMAS (2), 7 p.m. — Fat Albert and the Cosby kids learn the true meaning of Christmas in this cartoon special.

THE NUTCRACKER (4), 7 p.m. — Mrs. Betty Ford is the on-camera storyteller as the famed Bolshoi Ballet performs "The Nutcracker" in Moscow's Bolshoi Theatre.

TINY TREE (2), 7:30 p.m. — Buddy Ebsen, Allan Melvin and Paul Winchell provide the voices in this animated special about love and friendship.

FATHER KNOWS BEST: HOME FOR CHRISTMAS (4), 8:30 p.m. — The original cast of Father Knows Best are reunited as the Andersons enjoy the Christmas holiday celebration with the entire family.

DEAN MARTIN'S CHRISTMAS IN CALIFORNIA (4), 10 p.m. — Dean heralds the holiday season in a music-and-comedy special with guests Jonathon Winters, Gabriel Melgar, Crystal Gayle, Linda Lavin, Mireille Mathieu and the Goldiggers.

'60 Minutes' wins award

"Heart Attack," a feature segment presented on "60 Minutes," was named winner of a 1977 Howard W. Blakeslee Award of the American Heart Association in the network television category.

The award-winning report focused on Seattle, Wash., where one-fifth of the population has learned what to do to help someone survive a coronary. Co-editor Morley Safer and Imre Horvath, the producer of the segment, accompanied a Seattle paramedic team as it responded to emergency calls, visited a first-aid class for Seattle citizens, and talked with people who have been involved in the experience of reviving heart attack victims.

GOD'S SMUGGLER

—When he reaches the Iron Curtain with forbidden Bibles, will he be cleared to cross — or caught?

Simply beautiful music. Simply.

Sometimes under the barrage of audio specifications and claims you can forget the real function of audio components is to bring music into your life. Bang & Olufsen, however, has not forgotten this fact — as we believe the Beosystem 3500 demonstrates. Here is a sophisticated automatic turntable, the Beogram 3000, united with a critically acclaimed receiver, the Beomaster 3000-2. When Bang & Olufsen's new Phase-Link™ speakers complete the system, you create a remarkably simple way to bring the magic of the original performance into your listening room. If you really listen to music, but do not want to be an audio engineer, in the process, you are probably ready for Bang & Olufsen.

TO MARTIN STRAUSS
Pres. of Carpet World

The latter part of September I went to Carpet World upon a recommendation of a satisfied former customer of Carpet World to buy a wall to wall rug for a large one room Apt. expecting to pay between $150.00 and $200.00 but found exactly what I wanted for $138.00 which included padding and installing.

Now I am one of the many satisfied Carpet World customers and I recommend them to anyone needing a carpet.

THE BIBLE Says

IMMORTALITY HEAVEN AND HELL

Death means primarily separation: "prop. the death of the body, i.e. that separation (whether natural or violent) of the soul from the body by which life on earth is ended" (Page 282, Thayer's Greek-English Lexicon: thanatos).

"For the body apart from the spirit is dead . . ." (James 2:26, RV). The idea of annihilation is foreign both to the definition of thanatos (death) and its usage in the Scriptures.

Since the body of man is corruptible, man is subject to death (Hebrews 9:27). Thus, man is mortal: "libal to death" (Page 291, Thayer: thantos). Immortal means deathless.

In the resurrection, the corruptible body will be made incorruptible (1 Corinthians 15:42). Then the incorruptible body will be united with the incorruptible spirit. Since neither nature of man will then be subject to decay, man will no longer be subject to death. Hence, man will then be immortal (1 Cor. 15:54). In the resurrection, the righteous will be raised unto eternal life (John 5:28-29). And "So shall they ever be with the Lord" (1 Thessalonians 4:17). Life has meaning, then, only in view of eternity with God. Christ died in order that man might have life, i.e. put on immortality and have eternal rest for the faithful (John 14:1-4).

Since Satan is a spiritual being, we are told in the Revelation letter what is to happen to him and his followers. "And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever" (Rev. 20:10).

The case of the rich man and Lazarus in Luke 16:19-31 ought to be enough for any honest person to see that there is life after death. Jesus was warning that we need to make things right in this life, and then live right daily. If we do not, we shall have the reward of the rich man to be tormented; and we shall, no doubt, be begging for just a drop of water to cool our tongue as we are tormented in the flame.

If these passages are not a warning from the Lord of life after death and what will happen to the wicked, what is his point? How can men claim to believe the Bible and still deny the plain passages that we have cited in this article? They fact is, unless we believe all the Bible, we had just as well not believe any of it! (Read James 2:10).

RADIO TIPS

KLAC continues its series of 12 one-hour Christmas shows begun last Tuesday, with this week's programs featuring the talents of Stuart Hamblen, Tennessee Ernie Ford, Pat Boone, The Waltons, Loretta Lynn, Buck Owens and Bill Anderson. "The Twelve Days of Christmas" will be rebroadcast in the same order for 12 consecutive hours beginning at 4:30 p.m. on Christmas Eve.

A host of celebrities plus a policewoman, a fire captain and a man who trains Santas for the Yule season will share their memories and attitudes concerning Christmas on "Reflections of Christmas," Thursday at 6:30 p.m. on KNX. Among the participants are Ruth Carter Stapleton, Will Geer, Eva Gabor and Omar Sharif.

On Saturday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., KUSC will air a special 12-hour program of Christmas music from the Music Center which will be stereo simulcast with KCET, Channel 28. Following that, KUSC Theatre will present "Christmas from the British Isles" consisting of a British nativity play, Dylan Thomas reading from his "A Child's Christmas in Wales," and Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" read by Ralph Richardson.

Johnny Mathis discusses with host Fred Woodruff the music of Christmas and what the holiday season means to him this Thursday at 9 p.m. on KLON-FM with a repeat Christmas Eve at 9 p.m. Musical highlights of the program include "When a Child is Born," "Give Me Your Love for Christmas" and "The Lord's Prayer."

News from KMPC: All night DJ Sonny Melendrez, who is active in several aspects of show biz, will be hosting today's Sunday Sunday on Channel 7 at 9:30 a.m. Also, parents can save an expensive toll call to the North Pole by letting their children call (213) 520-8600 weeknights between 6:30 and 10 p.m. to talk to Santa. Santa, whose "Ho, Ho, Ho" often bears a strong resemblance to Roger Carroll's, will broadcast the calls live on Carroll's program.

For the 29th consecutive year, Douglas Edwards at the North Pole will present Douglas' colorful account of his imaginative trip to the North Pole visiting Santa, his wife and his many Christmas Eve helpers. Listen to KNX Thursday at 7:30 for this popular annual program.

KFAC presents an outdoor holiday Cultural Fest for the entire family today noon to 5 p.m. in Prudential Square, 5773 Wilshire Blvd. in Los Angeles. The public is invited, free of charge, for an afternoon of continuous holiday entertainment, food, arts, crafts and pet adoption. The event marks the culmination of KFAC's Holiday Toy Drive, so bring a toy if you can for children who have to spend their holidays in hospital beds.

KPFK reminds us that the 6th annual International Merrie Christmas Fair runs Dec. 17-24 at the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium. The Civic will be transformed into a joyous, bustling ethnic marketplace with three stages, hundreds of entertainers, over 110 craft and import booths and festive and foreign foods. Admission is $3.50 for adults and 50c for children under 12.

"Should civil servants have the right to strike?" is just one of the questions that will be discussed when Louis Kiger, guest on KMAX's "Community Forum." Kiger, who is a labor representative for the California State Employee's Association, will discuss why he feels strikes are necessary. The program will air on Monday at 10:30 a.m. The 30-minute interview will be hosted by Bob Gourley.

MYSTERY THEATRE KNX, 9:06 p.m.

Sunday — "The Thousand and First Door." A fugitive is talked into murdering his shrewish wife by a man he thought was his friend.

Monday — "Brothers of the Angle." A con man tries to prove he can be the conduit between a wealthy widow and her dead husband.

Tuesday — "Hope Springs Eternal." A woman is absolutely certain she'll see her husband again even though he disappeared 35 years ago.

Wednesday — "The Big Ten-Cent Hustle." The story of a dime, very valuable because it was stamped twice with the year 1934, is told by the dime itself.

Thursday — "Case Closed." An engineer turned thief barricades himself in a bank with a woman teller as hostage.

Friday — "The Witching Well." Trying to find out why his father sent someone in Ireland $800 a month for 20 years, a young Irish-American is appalled by what he learns.

Saturday — "A Christmas Carol." E. G. Marshall stars as Ebenezer Scrooge in Dickens' immortal classic.

ADVENTURE THEATRE — KNX, 7:06 p.m.

Sunday — "Three Times Magic." Three famous fables: "Jack and the Beanstalk," "Rumpelstiltskin," and "Beauty and the Beast."

Saturday — "The Valiant Little Tailor." A modest little tailor is expected to tame a unicorn and wild boar, capture giants and squeeze water from rocks after his injured pride compelled him to boast extravagantly.

BRITISH TV

A question, therefore, is whether the viewer who wants news headlines is going to have the patience to watch other pages of information flash across his television screen before he gets what he wants. The industry is viewing the viewer to see what happens.

Advertising agencies are particularly interested in the teletext magazine, since they envisage the possibility of its carrying pages of supermarket sales and the like, which do not appear on regular television channels. They also foresee the possibility of entertainment listings.

The teletext concept, however, is only the start of a more ambitious idea currently being pioneered here. Known as "viewdata," this experiment is scheduled to make its appearance next summer.

In contrast to the teletext magazine, which is transmitted through the air, the viewdata service will come through ordinary telephone lines connected to television sets.

And unlike the teletext system, in which an entire magazine is produced, viewdata will feature a two-way communications arrangement that will permit the audience to select the information it desires.

In other words, a viewer can dial for specific details on a range of topics that will be listed in an index provided with each device. The plan at the moment is to launch the experiment next summer with some 60,000 pages of information. The selection process will be handled by a computer.

The service would be available to subscribers only, with fees handled like telephone bills.

The viewdata system has already been bought by a German firm, and a French company is working to develop a similar service of its own. Electronics manufacturers are therefore optimistic about its future.

Ultimately, the viewdata system could replace the daily newspaper, since readers would be able to summon up the stories they want on their television sets. The drawback, though, is that they would have nothing for wrapping fish and chips — which, in Britain, could cause a crisis.

GOV. JERRY BROWN AND PRESIDENT CARTER

Q. Rampant runs the rumor out here that Jimmy Carter is prepared to dump Walter Mondale in 1980 and run instead with Gov. Jerry Brown of California. How good are the chances of a Carter-Brown Democratic ticket in 1980?—N.M., Los Angeles, Cal.

A. Not too good, largely because Brown is an astute, aggressive, eclectic politician. He clobbered Carter in several Democratic primaries in 1976. What he wants is the Presidency, not the No. 2 job. Brown might make a deal to run on the 1980 ticket if he felt sure that Carter and the "Georgia Mafia" would build him up for 1984. But if by 1984 Carter hasn't turned the country more prosperous, there is always the possibility that the electorate might vote in a Republican Administration and sink Brown, too. At this point, Jerry Brown prefers to keep his distance from Carter because there is no assurance that Carter is a future winner.

Q. I've heard that Simone Signoret, the French actress, is no longer wanted for jobs because she is too old and too fat. Is that true?—Daniele Fontaine, Cleveland, Ohio.

A. It is not true. Signoret is too old at 56 for ingenue roles, but she is in demand for character parts and leading roles of a type. For example, in her latest French film, "La Vie Devant Soi" (Life As It Is), she plays Madame Rosa, a dying ex-prostitute who looks after the children of other prostitutes and becomes deeply fond of an Arab boy. Her performance is magnificent and will undoubtedly win her an Oscar or an Oscar nomination.

Q. Who or what broke up the marriage between Steve McQueen and Ali MacGraw? I thought this was one Hollywood marriage made in heaven.—Landra J., Tucson, Ariz.

A. No third parties were involved in the MacGraw-McQueen breakup. Ali MacGraw is McQueen's superior in education and culture. He is her superior in acting. After a while the chemistry of physical attraction diminishes in most marriages, and the partners find they must talk. The MacGraw-McQueen marriage was not made in heaven. Like many Hollywood marriages, its incubator was a sound stage.

Q. Sen. Lowell Weicker (R., Conn.) has had six press agents in seven years. What's wrong with that guy?—Tony Greene, New Haven, Conn.

A. Says Weicker: "My current press secretary (and hopefully my last) is Rebecca Leet, 28. She is a great tennis player and can beat me handily. The trouble with her predecessors was that none of them could beat me on the tennis court. This resulted in inequitable relationships. I need a press secretary who can dominate me, and now I've found one." Weicker has also found a new wife, his former appointments secretary Camille Butler, who had best start brushing up on her tennis strokes at once.

Q. When Prince Charles of Britain visited San Francisco some months ago, didn't he secretly attend the Hookers' Ball in disguise?—F.T., Oakland, Cal.

A. Prince Charles was invited to attend San Francisco's annual Hookers' Ball by Margo St. James, spokeswoman for the prostitutes in the Bay Area. But he declined the invitation, as he did all those that held out the promise of "an amorous interlude."

Q. Is there a feud between Sophia Loren and her younger sister, Maria Scicolone, who is married to Benito Mussolini's son?—R.P.E., Suffern, N.Y.

A. No feud. Maria Scicolone, 39, recently married a 36-year-old Iranian physician, Abdel-Majid Tamiz. In 1962 she married Romano Mussolini, son of the late Italian dictator. They have two children, were divorced in 1976. Sophia may not have approved of her sister's latest marriage, but she has held her tongue.

Q. Did the late Aristotle Onassis ever pay $10,000 for a one-night stand with Eva Peron, wife of the president of Argentina? I have heard that story bandied about the French Riviera for years and want to know if it is true.—D. J., Palm Beach, Fla.

A. Onassis did not pay Eva Peron $10,000 for an assignation. In 1947 he and his wife lunched with Eva Peron and several other visiting Argentinians at the Hotel de Ville in Monte Carlo. Onassis asked Alberto Dodero, a friend of his in the Peron party, to arrange a more private dinner just for him and Argentina's First Lady, who had a villa down the coast at Santa Margherita. The arrangements were made, and Onassis found Eva Peron so marvelously receptive that in the morning he wrote a check for $10,000 as a contribution to her favorite charity. Whether Eva Peron was her own favorite charity, only she and Onassis know. And both, of course, are in no position to tell.

Q. It says in the newspapers that actress Katharine Hepburn was graduated from Bryn Mawr College in the Class of 1928. Doesn't that make her at least 70?—F.W., Germantown, Pa.

A. Miss Hepburn, skittish about her age, was born in Hartford, Conn., on Nov. 8, 1907.

Merit Attracts Large Numbers of High Tar Smokers.

Low tar MERIT with 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco gaining solid support from "taste" smokers.

Most current MERIT smokers have come directly from high tar cigarettes.

It's clear: low tar MERIT is delivering the kind of taste that can satisfy high tar smokers, the toughest "taste" critics of low tar smoking.

The reason is a real advance in tobacco technology that results in a way to boost natural tobacco flavor without the usual corresponding increase in tar.

It's called 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. MERIT and MERIT 100's are

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN

RISEING STAR Since the departure of portly Bert Lance from the inner sanctum, who has become Jimmy Carter's closest confidant (his wife excluded, of course)?

In the opinion of some perceptive newsmen, the answer is Jody Powell, technically listed as Mr. Carter's press secretary.

During 1977 Powell developed into "Jimmy Carter's point-man and lightning rod," which one reporter defines as "the fiercely loyal political masochist who takes the first salvos of the oppositional flack."

Outside the White House, Charles Kirbo, an Atlanta lawyer, and Bert Lance, the former Office of Management and Budget director, remain Carter's two most trusted personal and business advisers. But inside the mansion, the man to track is Jody Powell, the razor-sharp shoe-sculfler from Vienna, Ga.

At 34 Powell is a remarkably quick study. He may commit errors--as when he amateurishly tried to sink Sen. Chuck Percy (R., Ill.) in the Lance imbroglio--but he is far too intelligent to make the same mistake twice.

Powell is changing his White House role. The disputatious job of daily briefing the White House press is being turned over to Rex Granum, 27, his affable young deputy, while Powell becomes more involved in policy implementation and courting Washington's most influential opinion-makers.

It would surprise few reporters if in the years to come Jody Powell assumed in the Carter Administration the position Jim Hagerty occupied during the Eisenhower regime. Hagerty was much more than a press secretary. He was a Presidential friend, adviser, image-maker and policy-implementer.

ACTRESS JOANNE WOODWARD AND HUSBAND PAUL NEWMAN: "OLD CHEMISTRY"?

JOANNE AS 'LADY CHATTERLEY' Joanne Woodward, one of Hollywood's most talented and versatile actresses--she won an Academy Award 20 years ago for her performance in "The Three Faces of Eve"--has signed to star in "Lady Chatterley's Lover," the controversial classic by British writer David Herbert Lawrence.

The two-hour motion picture will be filmed for NBC-TV in England and telecast in the U.S. about a year from now.

"Lady Chatterley's Lover," D.H. Lawrence's final major work, was written in 1928 and banned in this country for 30 years. It deals with Connie Reid, the daughter of an artist, who marries Sir Clifford Chatterley, a mine owner. After a month's honeymoon, Chatterley returns to the World War I front, where he is severely wounded and rendered impotent.

He discusses with his wife the possibility of her having a child by another man to provide him with an heir. She takes a lover named Mellors, who is her husband's gamekeeper. The passion Connie and Mellors generate is irresistible, but their individual positions on the social scale raise formidable difficulties.

Joanne Woodward will, of course, play Connie. The actor who is to play the lusty gamekeeper has not yet been cast. Paul Newman has been suggested as a possibility, but since he is Joanne Woodward's longtime husband, it is felt in some quarters that such casting would constitute "old chemistry."

EQUAL PAY The women of Switzerland, who earned the right to vote in national elections only six years ago, have won the right to equal pay with men for equal work.

The Swiss Supreme Court recently ruled that a regulation under which women schoolteachers were paid $780 less per year than their male colleagues was unconstitutional.

The Swiss constitution guarantees equality, but for decades Swiss women have enjoyed little of it in public services, industry, and commerce.

READ AND WRITE

Two government pamphlets every woman should read are "Women and the Pill" and "Breast Self-Examination." Both are free.

For "Women and the Pill," send a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 592F, Pueblo, Col. 81009. For "Breast Self-Examination," send a postcard to Dept. 567F. Allow 4-6 weeks for delivery.

"Women and the Pill," written in question-answer form, deals with contraception and some of the risks associated with birth control pills.

"Breast Self-Examination" is an illustrated booklet that explains the procedure every woman should employ in examining her breasts monthly.

TOURIST BOOM

Before this year is out, more than 11 million foreign tourists will have visited Great Britain. They will have spent close to $5 billion, an all-time record.

This was the year of Silver Jubilee celebrations in Britain, and tourists flocked from everywhere to join the 25th anniversary of Queen Elizabeth II's reign.

Even so, Henry Marking, chairman of the British Tourist Authority, expects that it's all part of an upward trend. He says, hopefully, that by 1985 Britain will be hosting 17 million visitors a year who will spend an estimated $13 billion.

As the cost of transatlantic air travel decreases, the prices of hotel accommodations in the tourist centers of London increase and overcrowding becomes a major problem.

In 1976 the British pound hit a new low, dropping to $1.55, but now it is steadily rising. When it passes $2, that exchange rate will undoubtedly stem the tourist tide...at least a little.

BRIGHTENING THE IMAGE

When President Carter's Navy buddy, Adm. Stansfield Turner, was sworn in as director of the Central Intelligence Agency on March 9, 1977, the public image of the CIA had probably sunk to its nadir.

The agency was generally regarded as a governmental rogue elephant run amok.

Over the years--in violation of its charter--the agency had operated on the domestic front, opening mail, infiltrating student bodies, plotting assassinations, tape-recording reporters, hiring prostitutes, tapping telephones, poisoning innocent men and lying to Congress.

To improve its tarnished image, the CIA was scheduled this past spring to open its Langley, Va., headquarters (eight miles from the White House) to public tours. The FBI has been opening its doors to the public for years and in the process has developed its tour into one of the most popular tourist attractions in Washington.

The CIA, however, has decided to drop its plans for public tours. From Sept. 24 to Oct. 8, it conducted eight trial runs for some 3700 members of agency families, showing slides in the auditorium, lecturing on its history and offering a few exhibits on the ground floor.

"What we found out," says a spokesman, "is that it was impractical on working days; it presented all sorts of logistics problems. So what we've come up with is this: We will allow tours by members of selected groups and institutions.

"If a group chief will write the CIA Public Affairs Office, Langley, Va., two months in advance, we will consider the requests case by case and then make a decision.

"A few weeks ago we had the Washington, D.C., chapter of Sigma Delta Chi [the journalism fraternity] in. We took them around, served coffee and cookies, showed some exhibits and talked about the agency. It worked out very well, and we're prepared to do that on a limited basis."

Some of the CIA personnel think the idea of opening headquarters to any kind of tours by outsiders was and is "insane."

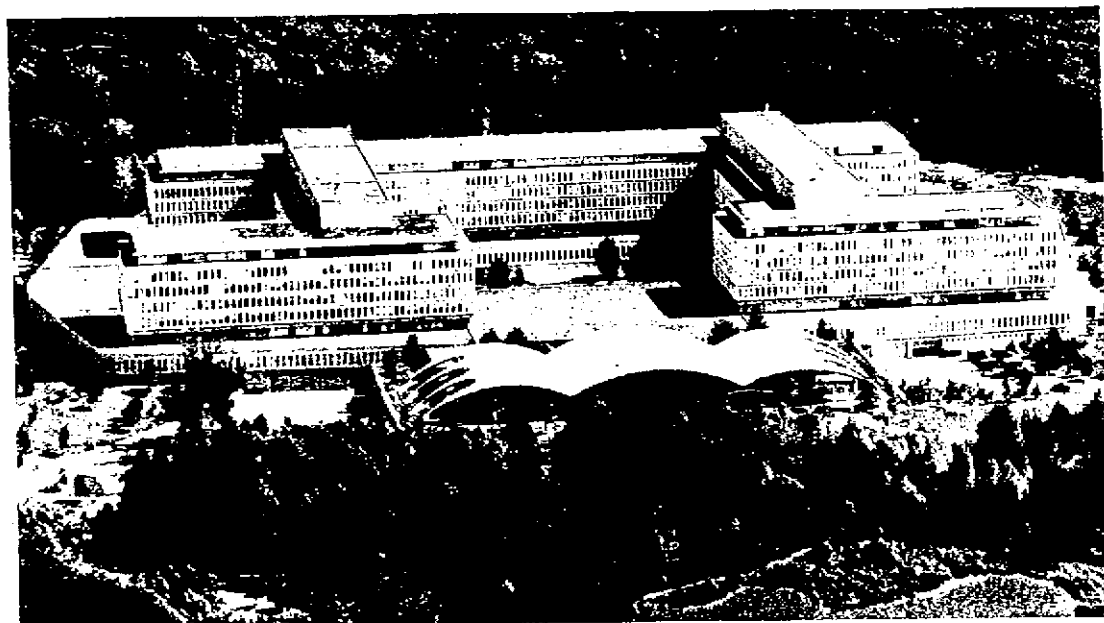

"None of my neighbors," says one employee, "has the slightest idea I work here. Why take even the slightest chance of blowing my cover? Besides, what is there here that we can really show?"

The CIA headquarters

consists of an eight-story building of glass and concrete set on 140 acres of well-guarded land. Barbed wire tops the chain-link fence circling the area. Cameras, recording devices and weapons carried by visitors are banned.

Inside the front entrance, a marble wall bears 35 chiseled stars, each in honor of an agent who gave his life in the line of duty. Beneath the stars, a small glass case contains the roster of the dead. Only 17 names are listed. The other 18 "unknown soldiers" are known, of course, to the men upstairs.

The CIA, it appears, has put together enough of a "show" to refurbish slightly its stained image. Public relations-wise, it has no way to go but up.

THE CIA WILL CONSIDER GROUPS ON A "CASE-BY-CASE" BASIS FOR TOURS OF ITS HEADQUARTERS IN LANGLEY, VA.

DOUBLE PLANTING

Last December a biography of Leonid Brezhnev, No. 1 Communist in the Soviet Union, was published in Russia. Subsequently Robert Maxwell bought the rights to publish the book in Britain.

A few months ago another Brezhnev biography, "Pages From His Life," was delivered to the New York publishing house of Simon & Schuster.

Both books are authored by a bureaucracy called "Soviet Committee," but each carries a different foreword supposedly penned by Brezhnev.

Most probably "Soviet Committee" consists of reporters from Novosti and Tass, the Soviet news agencies, and both books are larded with paeans and propaganda. Factual information concerning the lives of Communist leaders is exceedingly difficult to obtain.

In Moscow a few years ago, Intelligence Report asked about Brezhnev's annual salary. No Soviet official would even hazard a guess, while one confided that he was taking a dangerous risk by allowing that "Brezhnev receives as much as he needs and not one ruble more."

WORDS TO PONDER

"I think that as life is action and passion, it is required of a man that he should share the passion and action of his time at peril of being judged not to have lived."
—Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, 1884.

Maggie Kuhn:

Gray Panther on the Prowl

by George Michaelson

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Margaret Kuhn, 72, is proud of every wrinkle on her face and every gray hair on her head.

"Old age is nothing to be ashamed about," she says. "Rather, it is a triumph over great odds, something to be proud of. To be old and gray is beautiful!"

Such is the message that the spirited Ms. Kuhn—or Maggie, as she prefers to be called—is attempting to get across to the American public. As charismatic founder of the Gray Panthers, a highly vocal movement of some 10,000 members, she is out to rid the country of "age-ism," or discrimination based on age. "Old people should not be treated as wrinkled babies," she says in a cotton-soft voice but with her gray eyes flashing defiantly. "Old folks have plenty to offer this country—if only they are given a chance."

Forced to retire

For Maggie Kuhn, the campaign against age-ism began back in 1970 when, at 65, she was forced to retire from her job with the Presbyterian Church missions. Though she knew her mandatory retirement was coming, it shocked her. "I suddenly felt wounded and angry at having been sent out to pasture to get lost," she says. "Then I figured there must be thousands of old people just like me, and so I decided the time was ripe for us to fight back."

Thus began the Gray Panthers, and with it the "retired" Ms. Kuhn found herself working harder than ever. For the past seven years, the feisty "old lady" from Philadelphia—she doesn't like such euphemisms as "elderly" or "senior citizen"—has been vigorously pushing her cause. Traveling some 100,000 miles a year, she delivers, she guesses, at least 200 lectures and contributes almost all of her fees to the Gray Panthers. By now her face is familiar in Washington, and she is not above picketing the White House or cornering some legislator and telling him, sometimes in spicy language, exactly what she and her Panthers think. "Maggie has the gift," says one admirer, "of knowing how to shout at someone in a whisper."

Indeed at this point it looks as if the whispering and shouting of Maggie and her Gray Panthers, along with the voices of several other active groups, are beginning to be heard. For example, both the House and the Senate have formed select committees on aging, and the White House has added its own adviser. Nursing home laws have been changed to give residents a greater say in management. Congress is considering a bill to lift the mandatory retirement age from 65 to 70 for most workers, and next year President Carter will likely put forth a bill for some form of national health insurance.

'Those rotten myths'

"But most important," says Maggie Kuhn, "the Gray Panthers are successfully challenging all those rotten myths about old people. You know, all of us are supposed to be alike: crotchety and cranky, our brains shriveling up, and our sex organs withering away. That, of course, is nonsense. Many of us are livelier and smarter than ever. And as for sex, I'm afraid it's our adult children who are the pruders and who pass on myths about 'dirty old men' and 'dirty old ladies.'"

To counterbalance this "mythology," the Gray Panthers have taken their message to the media. They produce their own newspaper, they have radio programs in several cities, and they have formed Media Watch, a group of volunteers who monitor the press, radio and television, and file complaints over negative stereotyping of old people.

If the complaints are not redressed—and often they are—Maggie Kuhn is quite willing to take her case straight to the source. She recalls one appearance she made on Johnny Carson's Tonight Show, where she took Carson to task for his portrayal of the crotchety Aunt Blabby. "I told him his portrayal was unfair, unpleasant, and a whole lot of bull," she recalls. "Still, I didn't want to be too hard on him because . . . [she pauses, her voice shifting from panther to pussycat] . . . after all, even though Johnny is not yet a Gray Panther, he has stopped dying his hair and now lets it grow its lovely, natural color of gray."

Of course, to Maggie Kuhn age-ism is fundamentally no laughing matter. She notes that the number of people 65 and over in America is steadily increasing: today they make up about 10 percent of the population, and in another 50 years they are expected to reach 20 percent.

"And what is going to happen with these growing numbers of old people?" she asks, waving her finger indignantly. "In some societies, like the Masai in Kenya or like the Chinese, old people are revered. But not here. America is caught up in the Detroit syndrome, and we scrap-pile our old people like worn-out car hulks.

'Glorified playpens'

"That's right," she continues, "we warehouse away our so-called senior citizens in senior high-rises and nursing homes—or, as I prefer to call them, 'glorified playpens.' Sure, some old folks may not mind these arrangements—in fact, recently I got a letter from one lady who said, 'I like my playpen and I plan to go right on playing in it forever.' Well, for her I say okay, but for the rest of us old folks who still want to be part of this world, America needs to provide opportunities."

What Maggie Kuhn and her Gray Panthers have in mind is a new set of jobs and functions for old people. Specifically, they would like to see them as the "watchdogs" for the rest of society: monitoring the courts, the media, the welfare system, medical clinics, utility commissions, town councils, and almost everything else that might go wrong. Says Ms. Kuhn: "Old people are the only ones who have the sense of history and the time to do these jobs. I believe our presence alone would make a big difference."

Bridging the gap

Apart from this, Maggie Kuhn believes that old people, joined together with young people, ought to take the lead in pioneering "alternate life-styles." Thus, she advocates "intergenerational living." She would like to see old people going back to college and living in dormitories with their fellow students (they have done this at Bucknell, she notes). And off campus, too, she would like old and young to share housing.

Not one to ignore her own advice, the Panther leader currently shares her sprawling house in Philadelphia with two women, aged 35 and 30, and a man, aged 25. When she is not off traveling around the country, Maggie and her housemates get together to eat, debate politics, and sometimes to party. Maggie, who has never been married, says she has a number of "nice old men friends" whom she likes to invite over on such occasions.

"This living together and getting together of old and young is just what this society needs," contends Maggie. "When I was a child my family lived in my grandmother's house, and my brother and I always had a lot of old people around to pay attention to us and love us. Today, young people scarcely get to see an old person up close—that is, until they become one."

Accordingly, the Gray Panthers have opened their membership doors to people of all ages. About 25 percent of the Panthers now are under 30. Maggie affectionately calls them her "cubs." The youngest cub is the 12-year-old grandson of a San Diego Gray Panther. As Maggie Kuhn tells it, the boy was so taken with his grandfather's political activism that he decided, in his own way, to become a political activist, too; whereupon he promptly went about organizing his fellow sixth-graders to rid the school cafeteria of junk foods.

'Political marriage'

Though she smiles as she tells this story, Maggie Kuhn is serious about her ultimate vision of welding old and young people into a coalition for political change. "The old and the young can make a perfect political marriage," she says. "We are the ones who can best afford to take political risks because we have the least to lose." And indeed, at the recent national conference of Gray Panthers in Washington, D.C., the old and young discussed strategy for tackling—in addition to age-ism—almost every other social ill, from sexism to economic inequality.

Naively ambitious? Perhaps so. But as far as the Gray Panthers are concerned, they have just begun to prowl. "We are in for a long political fight," says Maggie Kuhn. "Still, America has changed so radically in the years since I was born—and in many ways for the better—that who could doubt more change is coming in the future?"

Sees many years ahead

And this is a future that Maggie Kuhn intends to see. Seated in her living room with her young housemates and their friends, she was asked how long she personally intended to go on with politics and the Panthers. "Well, it's hard to say," she answered, stroking her gray hair pensively. "I've got a little arthritis in my hands, but otherwise I'm healthy as a horse. I expect if I stay healthy and outgoing I'll be able to carry on till I'm 95 or 100. Don't you all think so?"

Glancing around the room at the admiring young faces, it was obvious nobody doubted it for a moment. ■

Maggie Kuhn stops off to meet with consumer advocate Ralph Nader in his Washington office. She travels some 100,000 miles a year giving lectures.

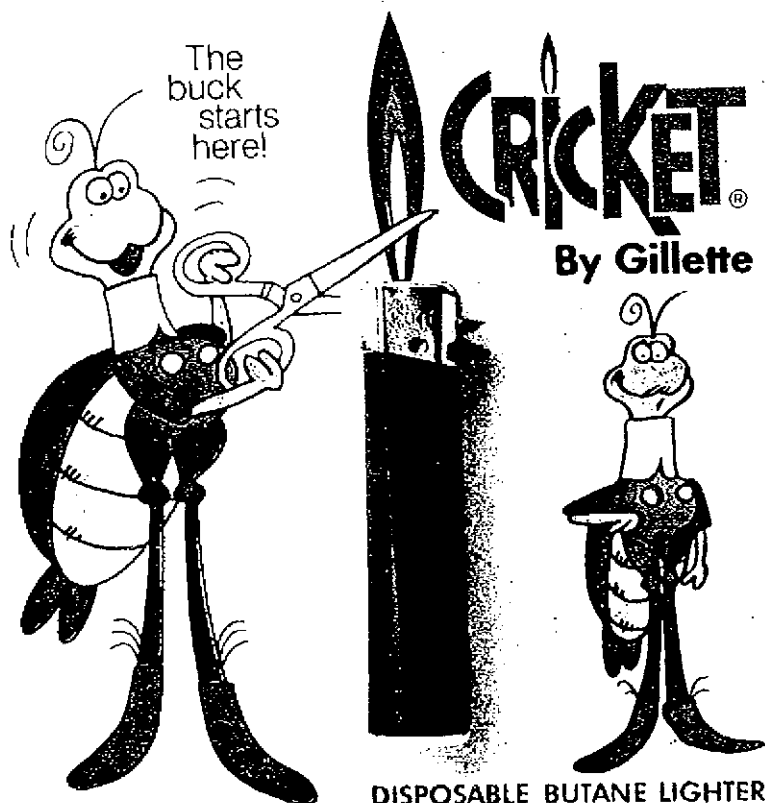

Housemates talk things over with Maggie in her Philadelphia home. She envisions a coalition of the old and the young to effect political change.

WHAT ELSE IS COOKING

12 days of CHRISTMAS

A happy way to remember a shut-in or a convalescent is to prepare a pretty basket containing 12 small packages, each marked "First Day of Christmas," "Second Day..." and so on, to be opened on the appropriate day.

In the first package might be a small Christmas corsage—poinsettias, holly, mistletoe, etc.—to pin on a bed jacket or robe. In the second, an individual homemade fruitcake baked in a custard cup and festively decorated; in the third, a packet of facial tissues in a pretty case that can be refilled; in the fourth, embroidery silks, a small needlepoint design plus yarns—some hobby to occupy hours; in the fifth, a paperback novel by a favorite author. The rest is up to you.

The possibilities are endless, and your imagination and thoughtfulness will be greatly appreciated.

PRUNES ARE plentiful

Once again the California prune crop will be plentiful. This year's supply is estimated at 304 million pounds, representing a 2 percent increase over the previous year.

Many holiday desserts and other dishes can be made with sun-sweetened prunes, which are sold in a variety of sizes and packages. They may be purchased in extra-large, large, medium and breakfast sizes in one- or two-pound cartons. Pitted prunes are available in 12- and 24-ounce cartons. Both whole and pitted prunes come in see-through packages to check for freshness.

THOSE wonderful WALNUTS

In a kitchen busy with holiday baking, walnuts are very much in evidence. So it is comforting to know that the walnut crop is estimated to hit an all-time high this year.

Consumers prefer to buy walnuts in the shelled form, and the one-pound plastic bag is the most popular pack. Shelled walnuts are also available in vacuum-sealed cans in one-pound, eight-ounce and four-ounce sizes.

Walnuts in the shell also remain popular and available nationally during the holiday season. A one-pound package yields two cups of nut meats after shelling.

A NEW GARNISH

Try this novel garnish for the holiday meat platter. Slice avocados lengthwise, remove seeds and brush surfaces with lemon juice. Fill the hollows with cranberry-orange relish, then heat at 325 degrees for about 15 minutes.

CHECK OVEN TEMPERATURE

The temperature at which meat is cooked—as well as the degree to which it is cooked—is very important. Meat roasted at too high a temperature will shrink excessively and will be drier and less tender.

If the actual temperature does not correspond to the temperature setting, the oven should be adjusted by a serviceman. Remember, too, that opening the oven door can reduce the temperature and affect cooking time.

update ON pork COOKERY

Pork cookery has changed during recent years and roasting procedures may need to be updated. It is now recommended that all fresh pork cuts be roasted to an internal temperature of 170 degrees. This results in less cooking time, juicier meat and less shrinkage.

MAKE-AHEAD APPETIZER

Beef logs can be made ahead and refrigerated. Spread slices of roast beef with softened cream cheese mixed with finely chopped chives or onion. Roll up (jelly roll fashion), chill, slice before serving.

why PAY MORE for LESS?

If you use dietetic packed foods, you know that they usually cost more than regular packages. While it may not seem fair to charge more for food when sugar and salt are omitted, the probable reason is the volume of product. When the volume is small, the markup must be greater to cover costs of merchandising, handling, processing, etc.

ROAST BEEF FOR CHRISTMAS

In England the festive roast of beef usually graces the holiday table. This year why not ring a change and serve beef at your holiday table, too.

Whatever the size of the group, there's a beef roast to fit your needs. The most popular holiday selections are a three- or four-pound rib roast, a rib eye roast, tip or rump. You might also consider a boneless beef top round roast for a large number of diners, a tenderloin for a few.

Figure two to three servings per pound for a roast that includes bones. For a boneless roast, count on three to four servings per pound.

Parade's All-American High School Football Team

by Haskell Cohen

The collegiate football stars of the future have just wrapped up their high-flying high school careers and will debut next fall on the gridirons of campuses throughout the nation. The finest of these youths have won places on PARADE's 15th Annual All-American High School Football Team. Many will go on to shine in the pro ranks.

Last year's Heisman Trophy winner, Tony Dorsett of Pitt, started his career as a PARADE All-American and is now with the Dallas Cowboys in the NFL. Other alumni of our teams starring in the pros include quarterbacks Richard Todd of the New York Jets, Pat Haden of the Los Angeles Rams and Joe Ferguson of the Buffalo Bills.

As in the past, selecting a squad was a tough assignment and the ultimate decisions were rendered by the men who know high school football talent best—the college recruiters. Assisting these coaches and scouts were writers who specialize in high school sports.

Thirty states are represented this year. Texas leads with eight players; Ohio placed six, and Georgia has five.

Injured trio

At the insistence of its panel of selectors, PARADE's squad includes lineman Steve Clark of Salt Lake City, Utah; running back Harold Brown of Kent, Ohio, and end Mike Cofer of Chamblee, Ga. Though suffering injuries during the course of the season, the trio played well enough when healthy to be highly recruited by at least 100 colleges.

There were no questions concerning health, however, when it came to picking Lester Williams, a 6-foot-3, 260-pounder from Opa Locka, Fla., as the best interior lineman in the country. Luis Sharpe of Detroit, Mich., ran a close second.

Jerry Pettibone, University of Oklahoma recruiter, says he has many supporters in rating Riki Gray of Tucson, Ariz., as the best linebacker, followed by Bob Crable of Cincinnati, Ohio.

And it is the consensus that Mike Carter of Albuquerque, N. Mex., is the best running back in the nation. Challenging him for supremacy are Pete Buchanan of Plymouth, Ind., and Brad Beck of Perryton, Tex.

Though a number of undergraduates won our experts' acclaim, each of this year's 56 All-Americans is a senior.

BETTY WEARS A NEW DRESS

by BETH MERRIMAN

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Popular for centuries, a Betty is an old-fashioned fruit pudding. Apple Betty is perhaps the best known of the family, but there are several others. Oddly enough, we didn't remember ever having eaten a Pear Betty, and now—with juicy, sweet winter pears in season—we thought it might be fun to try one. The mellow flavor of pears needed perking up a bit, however, so we added the tang of lemon, the zest of allspice and cinnamon, and the richness of molasses.

Warm from the oven, with frozen yogurt melting on top, Spicy Pear Betty is a beautiful dessert for Christmas or any winter day.

spicy pear betty

2 cups coarse fresh bread crumbs
1/2 cup melted butter or margarine
2 1/2-5 cups pared, cored and sliced fresh pears (4 large pears)
1/2 cup sugar
2 teaspoons lemon peel
1 teaspoon allspice
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
Dash of salt
1/4 cup light molasses
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons water
Frozen vanilla yogurt, slightly thawed

Butter a 1 1/2 quart casserole. Toss all bread crumbs with butter; reserve 3/4 cup for topping. Combine remaining crumbs with pears. Mix sugar, lemon peel, allspice, cinnamon and salt. Toss with pear mixture; spoon into casserole. Stir together molasses, lemon juice and water; pour over pears. Sprinkle with reserved crumbs. Bake covered at 375 degrees for 30 minutes; uncover; bake 15 minutes longer. Spoon into serving dishes. Top with frozen yogurt, if desired. Makes six servings.

Now with

At age 45, Sen. Ted Kennedy (D., Mass.), shown above in the writer's study, has already spent 15 years in the U.S.

Senate. How much longer will he be content as a Senator, or will he one day decide to make the Presidential run?

Quizzing Teddy Kennedy

by Lloyd Shearer

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Last month, Edward Moore Kennedy, 45, the senior U.S. Senator from Massachusetts, held subcommittee hearings in the black and Chicano districts of this city.

Media persons who covered Teddy Kennedy found him—with his strong, clear voice, his broad, handsome face, his bright blue eyes and curly, graying hair—as photogenic and charismatic as ever. Several reporters, among them this one, wondered what had happened to "the inevitable Presidency of Teddy Kennedy."

Before a peanut-farmer-turned-politician, Jimmy Carter, edged himself into the last Presidential race, the prospect of Teddy Kennedy occupying the White House in the post-Watergate 1970's seemed reasonable and problematical.

In early 1974 all the national polls revealed Kennedy as the front-runner for the Democratic Presidential nomination. Other potential contenders (we forget how many developed)—Senators Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, Walter Mondale of Minnesota, Henry Jackson of Washington, Frank Church of Idaho, Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, George McGovern of South Dakota, Birch Bayh of Indiana, ex-Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma, Gov. Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania, Gov. Jerry Brown of California, Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona, Gov. George Wallace of Alabama, Sargent Shriver of Maryland, and Jimmy Carter of Georgia—all knew that if Teddy Kennedy really wanted it, the 1976 Democratic nomination was his.

But after months of self-assessment and soul-searching, Teddy Kennedy decided not to run. Why? Mail from the public indicated that many voters had not forgotten the July 1969 night at Chappaquiddick when his car plunged into the water and Mary Jo Kopechne, the 28-year-old girl at his side, drowned. The Republican opposition was sure to re-tell that accident and make it an issue of character.

In addition, further tragedy had struck the Kennedy household. The Senator's son Teddy Jr., invaded by cancer, lost his right leg. The Senator's wife Joan, wracked by emotional instability, developed a drinking problem. The Senator's 13 nieces and nephews, the offspring of his two assassinated brothers, John and Robert, regarded him as a surrogate father. And always there hung over Teddy the specter of further assassination, the possibility that another madman might gun him down just as two had killed his brothers.

Accordingly on Sept. 23, 1974, Teddy took himself out of the running. "... My primary responsibilities are at home," he explained. "It has become quite apparent to me that I would be unable to make a full commitment to a campaign for the Presidency. I simply cannot do that to my wife and children and the other members of the family."

Did Senator Kennedy, via that statement, abandon for all time his hopes for White House occupancy? Would he possibly seek the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1980, 1984, 1988, 1992? Would he remain wed to the U.S. Senate until retirement?

To determine his views, I asked the Senator the following questions:

Q. Do you still have any Presidential ambitions?

A. I've been reelected by the people of Massachusetts to another term in the Senate which has five more years to go.

Q. Are you reconciled to remaining a United States Senator indefinitely?

A. I expect to remain in the United States Senate for the foreseeable future. I believe President Carter will be re-nominated and reelected in 1980, and I expect to support him in that campaign. Beyond that I haven't given any real thought to what might happen. It's simply too far in the future to speculate.

Q. Do you believe in the conspiracy theories concerning the murders of your two brothers? And are you satisfied that each was the scheme of one man?

Froilan lives in the highlands of Guatemala in a one-room hut with dirt floors and no sanitary facilities. Labor there is so cheap that, for men like Froilan's father, hard work and long hours still mean a life of poverty. But now life is changing for Froilan.

Her name? We don't know. We found her wandering the streets of a large city in South America. Her mother is a beggar. What will become of this little girl? No one knows. In her country, she's just one of thousands doomed to poverty.

The world is full of children like these who desperately need someone to care, like the family who sponsors Froilan.

It costs them $15 a month, and it helps give Froilan so very much. Now he eats regularly. He gets medical care. He goes to school. Froilan writes to his sponsors and they write to him. They share something very special.

Since 1938 the Christian Children's Fund has helped hundreds of thousands of children. But so many more need your help. Become a sponsor. You needn't send any money now—you can "meet" the child assigned to your care first. Just fill out and mail the coupon. You'll receive the child's photograph, background information, and detailed instructions on how to write to the child. If you wish to sponsor the child, simply send in your first monthly check or money order for $15 within 10 days. If not, return the photo and other materials so we may ask someone else to help.

Take this opportunity to "meet" a child who needs your help. Somewhere in the world, there's a suffering child who will share something very special with you. Love.

KENNEDY CONTINUED

A. It is always easy to criticize investigations years after they take place. But my family and I have remained satisfied with the conclusions of the official inquiries into the deaths of both my brothers.

Q. What is your relationship with the President—hot, lukewarm or cold?

A. I feel that I've got a strong, mutually responsive relationship with President Carter. Personally, he's been kind, considerate and helpful, and I like him very much.

Q. What sort of President do you think Carter has been in his first year?

A. President Carter has made a number of important contributions in his first year in office. In the area of foreign policy I believe that his emphasis on human rights has given new hope to millions of people around the world who cannot enjoy the rights most Americans take for granted. His effort to reach an agreement with the Russians on strategic arms offers the prospect that we can control the nuclear threat.

In domestic policy, I think the President's efforts to deal with the energy crisis have been enormously important. It's not an easy task, and it's one which will take years to complete. But he deserves full credit for making the first real attempt to deal with the matter on a comprehensive basis, and I've tried to support him in that effort.

In a variety of critical areas we've worked closely together. Most recently, for example, the Administration and I, with the late Sen. John McClellan of Arkansas and others, were able to agree on a complete revision of the U.S. criminal code, an effort that had not been undertaken in 200 years of this nation's history. The result has been that the Senate Judiciary Committee recently reported out an enormously complex bill to revise the entire code. It's a step that will have important implications in our nationwide effort to combat crime and improve the fairness of our criminal justice system.

I also expect to be working closely with the President in the coming year as the Administration develops its proposals on tax reform, national health insurance, and other matters.

Q. Do you believe that we should recognize the People's Republic of China, and if so, when?

A. I believe that the United States should move as quickly as possible toward normalized relations with the People's Republic of China. We cannot conduct a realistic foreign policy while failing to conduct normal relations with the most populous and one of the most important nations in the world.

Q. What work have you done in the U.S. Senate that you are most proud of?

A. Over the long term, I'm most proud of my efforts to improve the quality of health care in the United States. As chairman of the Senate Health Subcommittee I've been able to play a role in legislative efforts to improve community health programs, to bring the focus of the federal government to bear on the problem of mental retardation, and to insure that the drugs we use are both safe and effective.

I'm hopeful that efforts now underway to reduce the cost of medical care for the elderly and to provide for a nationwide system of health insurance will prove fruitful in the near future. Much remains to be done in this field. But we've made an important start, and I'm proud that I've been able to play a key role in that effort.

If I had to point to a single legislative achievement that gives me the most satisfaction, however, I would cite the legislation to extend the right to vote to 18-year-olds. Persons between the ages of 18 and 21 are qualified to serve in the military, to pay taxes if they work, and to conduct nearly all their affairs as adults. There's no reason they should have been denied the right to vote, and I'm particularly proud that the legislation extending them the franchise bears my name.

Q. If you could have anything in life that you don't have now, what is it that you would most want?

A. Life has been extraordinary to me and my family. We have, of course, had our share of tragedy. But I think that the chance to repay this nation for the benefits it has bestowed on me and my family is the only opportunity I would hope for. I feel that my work in the Senate offers me this chance to repay at least part of that debt, and I am grateful to the people of my state and many others around the nation who have aided me in that task.

Q. What do you consider the most pressing problem in the world today?

A. Certainly the most immediate problem is the issue of nuclear arms control. President Carter has made some important new initiatives in the effort to arrive at an agreement with the Soviet Union to control the nuclear menace. Now there are indications that the Soviets may be willing to reciprocate. But the problem goes beyond the superpowers. We must also find a way to control the spread of nuclear weapons to smaller countries so that we don't face the continual risk of having a small border dispute in some remote corner of the world escalate into a holocaust that could engulf us all.

Over the long term, a major problem facing the world is the growing disparity between the wealthy nations and the lesser developed countries. This manifests itself in a number of areas—hunger, overpopulation, health care, industrial development, and standards of living. Unless we can find a way to bring the poorer nations of the world out of the cycle of deprivation and despair in which they now exist, we can never hope for any real progress toward world peace.

Q. What do you consider the most pressing problem in the United States?

A. The most pressing problem in the United States is the economy. Unemployment, inflation, and the energy crisis are all interrelated segments of the economic difficulties we face. To find a way to put the unemployed to work without kindling new inflation and to solve the energy crisis without a major jolt to the economy must be given top priority. These problems must be solved before we can begin to make real progress in the effort to fight crime, to improve health care, to increase the quality of education, and to progress in so many other areas.

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Revealing Polls

Youth surveys taken in the United States, Great Britain, and West Germany—three of the world's most cultured and highly developed countries—reveal that teenagers on both sides of the Atlantic are turned off by politics, religion, other serious subjects.

In Britain, a survey commissioned by the Church of England's educational board shows that many British children demonstrate more enthusiasm and faith in science-fiction than they do in God.

They have an open mind about spaceships, creatures from outer space, and men on Mars but regretfully admit that contemporary religious instruction offers them practically nothing. Many say they only half-believe in God.

In this country, a recent Gallup youth poll indicates that American homes and schools are producing political illiterates. Fewer than one-third of the boys and girls interviewed by the pollsters could identify their local Congressman or woman. Only 52% knew the name of the Vice President of the U.S. And only 63% could name their state governor.

In West Germany, a survey of attitudes among 1500 young people reveals that the largest percentage of girls (42%) are interested in clothes and fashion, then education, jobs, marriage, and politics.

"I should like to have a good job and later to marry," says 15-year-old Cordelia.

The "Jugendreport" says: "This is what most [German] youngsters hope to get out of life: personal freedom, good money, satisfying work and a happy family life."

When young West Germans were asked, "Do you think everyone in this country can make it to the job he or she wants by working hard?" 45% said yes, 55% no.

This lack of faith in "the system" is of course what gives birth in many cases to revolutionaries.

Beer Addict

Alice Cooper, 33, the freaked-out son of an Arizona minister who became one of the most bizarre attractions in the history of rock, used to brag about his beer-drinking capacity to reporters.

Alice claimed that he often drank 40 cans of beer a day and that he and his rock group spent $200,000 a year on alcohol.

A few weeks ago, Alice—real name; Vincent Furnier—removed himself from a film production in Hollywood and flew to New York where he committed himself as an alcoholic. He asked the sanitarium doctors for their well-known dryout cure. Hopefully he's achieved it by now.

For years young musicians of every type have become drug users in the belief that drugs, ranging from marijuana to heroin, improve their music-making abilities. Perhaps they do, but drugs also cut short their lives and frequently send them to jail. If, like Alice, they are lucky enough to treat their addictions in time, they somehow may overcome them.

My FAVORITE jokes

My philosophy is this: "Two wrongs don't make a right, but three left turns do."

I like my girlfriend, but she's a real nut about seasoning. She even puts salt and pepper on her toothbrush.

You can tell when it's football season. On Sunday and Monday nights, TV repairmen on call get a police escort.

I crossed a porcupine with a cotton plant. I got a needlepoint quilt.

It's easy to tell a speed-reader. He's the person who has to look up Frank Zumwalt in the phone book and starts on page one.

I've always been the cautious type. Once I was all alone with a girl in the tunnel of love. I wanted to kiss her, but it was too awkward with our life jackets on.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mitch Krug gave up a career as an electrical engineer to go into comedy and says: "I really enjoy it. I'm a famous person, but nobody knows it." An ex-New Yorker, Mitch lives in California and has performed at clubs in San Francisco, Los Angeles and his old hometown. Most recently, Mitch says, he "won a parakeet in a contest. It was a consolation prize. First prize was inner peace and tranquility."

Here are some of his jokes:

They say crime runs in the family. The other night I was robbed by this little gray-haired lady. She said her son the mugger was home with the flu.

You know, parking is very difficult on the East Coast. If you're driving a car through Manhattan and see a parking spot, you take it—even if you're driving to Connecticut.

There are a lot of rich hippies in California. Where else but here can you see a hippie driving a Rolls-Royce with a license plate saying "I'm Rich—Can You Dig It?"

My brother was a jogging nut. Then his company transferred him to Venice. The first day there he drowned.

I think it's going to be another cold, cold winter. There are so many birds flying south, they've been given their own flight pattern.

These days kids relate everything to modern technology. They see the moon, think it's just the sun with weak batteries.

I never realized those fire detectors were so effective until I walked under one with a smoked ham.

I found a wild new religious cult. Its spiritual leader is a praying mantis.

I've never had much business sense. This past summer I paid $5000 for the hot dog concession at a vegetarians' convention.

Picture this: It's been raining for 40 days and 40 nights, and Noah's standing on the deck of the ark muttering, "So why does it have to rain on my vacation?"

HOW THE CLUB OPERATES

Simply mail the application together with check or money order for $1.86 as payment (that's $1.00 for your first 11 selections, plus 86¢ for shipping and handling).

Every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's music magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest... plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off the regular Club prices.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing -- it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, simply fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified.

You will always have at least 10 days in which to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days in which to decide, you may return it at our expense, for full credit.

Your own charge account will be opened... the selections you order will be mailed and billed at regular Club prices, which currently are $6.98 or $7.98—plus shipping and handling. (Multiple unit sets and Double Selections may be somewhat higher.)

After completing your enrollment agreement (by buying 8 selections within 3 years), you may cancel membership at any time. If you decide to continue, you'll be eligible for our generous money-saving bonus plan. Act now!

Selected Tradition Diamond Gift Jewelry

Lifetime trade-in. Sears allows you full cash price paid (exclusive of taxes and finance charge) on any Tradition diamond ring, pin, earrings in trade for a higher priced diamond at any time.

Buy Sears diamonds with confidence. Because diamond weights are seldom identical, approximate carat weights are shown. Sears gives you a Carat Weight Certificate which states the exact weight, to one-hundredth of a carat, of every Tradition center diamond of 1/20 carat or more.

Choose from a large collection of earrings, pendants, fashion rings, cocktail rings and Men's rings.
